YUCATAN DECLARES WAR

GEN. COLE CALLS FOR MORE MEN

BLANK REFUSAL TO CARRANZA DEMAND

Washington, June 19.—Administration officials this afternoon admitted the reply of the United States to the demand of Carranza that the United States withdraw its forces from Mexico has been sent forward to the head of the de-facto government in Mexico City. The text of the communication, which specifically declines to meet the request of the First Chief, will be made public here as soon as the department received word that it is in the hands of Carranza.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
International News Service Correspondent.

Washington, June 19.—The Mexican government, through Ambassador Designate Arredondo here, has demanded of the State Department that orders be issued to the commanders of all United States warships in Mexican waters not to land any men at any point on Mexican soil.

Ambassador Arredondo admitted shortly before noon that he had made such a "request" by order of General Carranza. He said that the request was made to prevent certain attack upon any American marines or seamen should they land.

The Mexican embassy also confirmed reports of a clash between American sailors and Mexicans at Mazatlan, in which two Mexicans were wounded and two American officers taken prisoners. According to the embassy officials the American officers later were released.

"It is to prevent any such occurrence in the future that we have asked that American sailors be kept on board their vessels," said Arredondo.

"My government in the note delivered to the State Department requests that the American government issue orders prohibiting any naval officer or man from landing on Mexican soil of

SPRINGFIELD GIRL IS FIRST 'WAR BRIDE'

Springfield, June 19.—To this city belongs the honor of having the first war bride of the present Mexican disturbance. She is 19-year-old Bertha G. Millett, No. 30 Hunt's terrace. She was married shortly before 7 o'clock this morning to 18-year-old Earl B. Smith of No. 84 Saratoga street, a private in Company B, Second Regiment, M. V. M.

Smith received the mobilization call at 3 o'clock this morning, and immediately notified the young woman, with whom he had been keeping company for some time. The young couple decided that they had better get married at once, and after securing their parent's consent, the youth visited the home of Judge Wallace I. Heady of the police court. Judge Heady issued a special permit, waiving the five day law, and City Clerk Elijah Newell, who was called on at 6:30, issued a license.

The ceremony was performed at 6:55 by the ev. Herbert E. Thayer at his home in Garfield street, the parents of the young couple being present. Young Smith then kissed his bride and hurried away to the armory while his wife accompanied his parents to their home where she will await his return.

BRAVES AND GIANTS GAMES PUT OVER

New York, June 19.—Rain stopped all baseball in New York city today and accordingly the Braves and Giants have gathered together another pair of double-headers.

Late Mexico Bulletins

El Paso, June 19.—The Mexican State of Yucatan has declared war against the United States, according to a report received here today. There is no confirmation. Yucatan is at the southern extremity of Mexico and has a government which is practically the same as in Mexico City.

San Antonio, Tex., June 19.—War preparations on a big scale are in progress all along the border. Special precautions are being taken to guard Brigadier-General Pershing's lines of communication for fear of a sudden Mexican attack. The United States cavalry at Brownsville is being held in readiness to cross the Rio Grande.

Washington, June 19.—Secretary Baker has asked Congress to make the Hay-Chamberlain bill effective immediately instead of July 1. This would make all of the militia now being mobilized available for immediate service in Mexico.

German-Americans First at Greenfield

Greenfield, June 19.—T. Company of the Second Regiment was mobilized in an hour today, and immediately there was a rush to enlist. The first to enroll were three German-Americans.

The early enlistments were: Earle H. Koons, Carl W. Ronnell, son of Rev. W. E. Ronnell, pastor of the German-Lutheran Church; Sergeant Fred L. Pfersick and Corporal George F. Martin, both of whom re-enlisted; John F. Harrington, William M. Titman, Edward W. Carter, Clarence Dickinson, Richard D. Cone and H. T. Partridge.

BAY STATE MILITIA READY IN 12 HOURS

ADJUTANT GENERAL CHARLES H. COLE today sent out an appeal for more enlistments in the militia. He said:

"The Massachusetts militia wants good, able-bodied young men. Go to the nearest armory and see one of the officers there. They will tell you how to enlist. Now is the time to volunteer for your State and for your country. If you are in good physical condition, and want to see service under the flag, enlist now."

Massachusetts answered President Wilson's call to arms today by mobilizing her militia in twelve hours. By noontime 90 per cent. of the State troops were at their headquarters, uniformed and equipped, and the only absentees were those who could not be reached by telegraph or telephone.

The spirit of the State was further manifested by hundreds of young men who flocked to the various armories and made applications for enlistment. Reports from other parts of New England showed the same conditions to prevail, and it was estimated that several thousand had offered their services to the government.

Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole, who was much pleased at the rapidity of mobilization, issued a statement to the AMERICAN, in which he said that the troops now at full peace strength will be ordered to the Framingham training grounds tomorrow for "indefinite service."

The record for rapid mobilization will probably go to G Company, Eighth Regiment, which was assembled, equipped and at full strength, except four men, at 5:30 this morning.

General Cole's statement follows:

The militia was mobilized in twelve hours. That speaks for its efficiency. I received a report this morning from one company, H of Salem, that showed 100 per cent. in less than that time.

By noon today there were more than 90 per cent. of the militia in quarters, and those absent were men who are out of town.

ARTILLERYMEN WAIT WORD TO GO SOUTH.

New London, Ct., June 19.—Following the departure for the border yesterday of 134th and 144th companies of U. S. coast artillery from Fort Wright, it was learned today that companies 12, 88, 132 and 157 of the corps at Forts Michie and Terry are in readiness and expecting to go at any time.

BAY STATE MILITIA, UNDER ARMS IN 12 HOURS, PITCHES CAMP TOMORROW

NEW ENGLAND PROMPT TO MOBILIZE ITS FORCES

The militia will start for Framingham tomorrow. I could move them there today, but I want to give the men a chance to get their clothes together and settle up their businesses before they start. They are in their armories in readiness now, but I believe it is better to wait a short time before moving them.

Orders have been issued to the quartermaster-general regarding the securing of supplies for the Framingham camp, and everything is in readiness to receive the men. The judge advocate-general and the surgeon-general have also received their camp orders.

I have received a large number of telephone calls today by men who wanted to know if they could join the militia. The militia needs men, and anyone who would like to enlist should go to the nearest armory.

I do not know how long it will be before we receive the order to entrain for the border, but I do not think that it is many days off. My orders are to have the men ready for a minute's notice, and they are ready. That is my answer to the efficiency of the Massachusetts militia.

The enthusiasm over mobilization was more strongly in evidence in Worcester than in any other New England city, more than 300 young men being on hand at the Worcester armory early today to enlist.

The rush to enlist in the regular service was not marked so strongly, but it was announced that the United States recruiting station on Tremont row would keep open until midnight tonight to accommodate those who may come from out of town to join the regular army.

It was learned today that the famous United States Army Reserve of seventeen men has been reduced to sixteen, Harry H. Grossman of East Boston having left it. Grossman entered the reserve in 1915 and was one of the men who received an invitation from Congressman Gardner to attend the dinner which he gave to the members of the reserve last winter.

Adjutant-General Cole announced shortly before noon that the total number of Massachusetts troops mobilized at that time was 4,828 officers and men. These are distributed as follows: Infantry, 3,360 officers and men; cavalry, 344; field artillery, 423; signal corps, 135; field hospital, 87; ambulance corps, 56, and 25 attached officers.

Lieutenant-Colonel William B. Emery, quartermaster-general, has arranged with the railroads and trolley companies for the transportation of troops tomorrow, beginning about 6 a. m. Brigadier-General Sweetser and a corps of officers will go to Framingham today to plan camp site, as the old muster field will not care for only about four regiments, necessitating additional ground.

HORSES ARE SCARCE.

Some difficulty is being experienced in securing the necessary number of horses, some 2,000 being needed for mounts and for draught purposes. A Troop's present strength is three officers and 71 men; B Troop, two officers and 44 men; C Troop, three officers and 33 men, and D Troop, two officers and 50 men.

Washington dispatches state that to Massachusetts will probably go the honor of being one of the first States to send troops to the border. It is believed that the cavalry units of this State, together with those of Illinois and Ohio, will be the first turned over to General Funston.

Battery A of the First Field Artillery numbers four officer and eighty-two men, and is considered one of the crack batteries of the United States citizen soldiery.

Company A of the Signal Corps totals three officers and fifty-five men and the hospital detachment three officers and fifty-three men.

In Vermont it was reported that a large number of foreign born citizens were offering themselves for enlistment, the Greeks predominating.

The Massachusetts troops that have received orders to mobilize are the entire second brigade, comprising the Fifth, Eighth and Ninth Regiments; the Second Regiment of the First Brigade, with headquarters at Springfield; First and Second battalions of the field artillery, comprising six field batteries; the First Squadron of Cavalry, the Signal Corps, the Ambulance Corps, the field hospital and the sanitary troops. The entire force comprises 4,000 officers and men, the largest body of State troops in New England.

2 UNITS NOT CALLED.

The Sixth Regiment, Naval Militia, Corps of Coast Artillery and First Corps of Cadets were the only units not called.

Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole had his mobilization plans all worked out, and upon arrival at the State House last night immediately began the work of calling the troops to arms.

Telephones were used to a great extent, police officers routed out sleeping militiamen, and the militia was wakened on the fire alarm of those cities and towns that have audible fire signals.

At daybreak the men began to arrive at the various armories, and by 7 o'clock they were mustered, equipped and ready to start for Framingham the moment the word was passed.

At Framingham Captain E. F. Tandy, commandant of the arsenal, announced that everything was in readiness and that he could handle the soldiers as fast as they arrived. There are plenty of tents at the muster ground and the troops will carry with them all other equipment, Captain Tandy stated that the cavalry, artillery and infantry corps would probably be quartered outside the grounds, as is the usual custom.

The Massachusetts troops are particularly well trained, and their officers have just completed a new instruction duty at South Sudbury. The officers of the First Brigade were still at the camp today when the order was sent forth, and immediately announced they were ready to take the field.

The speed with which the militiamen assembled is illustrated by an incident at Salem. Private John Perry of G Company of Gloucester, who is a fireman employed by the Boston & Maine, was taken from his train at the Salem station just as it was about to start for Portland, placed in an automobile and rushed to the Gloucester armory.

RUSH OF WORK HERE.

In Boston proper the work of mobilization went on with a rush, and all the surrounding cities and towns showed signs of the greatest activity. So many young men expressed a desire to enlist today in Everett that a second company may be formed in that city.

The men were not the only ones to offer their services, for in many places numbers of women went to the armories or telephoned to various officers, asking that they might be allowed to help in some way.

In Springfield and Holyoke mill officials co-operated with the military authorities by ordering the militia call blown at 7 o'clock this morning. The spirit of co-operation was in evidence everywhere, automobiles being offered the soldiers, and many other facilities being placed at their service.

The staff headquarters of the various branches of the service buzzed with preparation. Colonel Willis W. Stover of the Fifth was on hand early at the Charlestown headquarters of that outfit, and the other regimental commanders were Colonel Edward L. Logan of the Ninth, who was in charge at the East Newton Street Armory; Lieutenant-Colonel Perry of the Eighth at the Cambridge armory in place of Colonel Frank A. Graves, who is in Canada; Major Charles A. Schmits, commanding First Squadron Cavalry, and Colonel John H. Sherburne, commanding First Regiment, Field Artillery, the headquarters of both of which are at the Commonwealth Avenue Armory in Allston.

The transmission of the official orders from Washington to the Massachusetts militia was delayed. Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole was at Ashland, N. H., together with Brigadier-General William B. Emery, and Colonel Edward L. Logan, when he received his first intimation that the long expected call had arrived.

He hurried back to Boston, and without waiting for official instructions, sent out the preliminary commands to start the machinery of the mobilization moving. Then he got into touch by telephone with General Albert L. Mills, chief of the division of militia affairs at Washington, and was told that the orders for Massachusetts were on the way.

GOVERNOR'S ORDER.

Shortly after Adjutant-General Cole arrived at the State House he received the following message from Governor McCall, who was at Hartford, Ct., at the home of Robert H. Schultz:

Issue all orders necessary for immediate mobilization of troops called for by the federal government, according to the terms of the call.

Steps were immediately taken to gather together the 2,000 or more horses that will be needed by the Bay State troops. This alone proved to be more difficult than gathering the men together with full equipment.

One of the first steps taken by Adjutant-General Cole was the calling together for a conference the heads of the regiments and corps to receive marching orders. These included: Colonels William C. Hayes, Second Regiment, Warren E. Sweetser, Sixth, Edward L. Logan, Ninth, Frank A. Graves, Eighth, William W. Stover, Fifth, Major Charles A. Schmits, First Squadron Cavalry, Colonel John W. Sherbourne, Field Artillery, Captain Woodman, Hospital Corps, and Captain George Keenan, Signal Corps.

LOGAN WANTS VOLUNTEERS.

During this conference, the Adjutant-General talked with the Governor by telephone, agreeing to call first the Ninth, Eighth, Fifth and Second Regiments, with Brigadier-General E. Leroy Sweetser in charge.

Before 8 a. m. A, B and H companies of the Fifth Regiment had mobilized at full peace strength at the Charlestown Armory. Throughout the early hours, the non-coms had rounded up the men with such good effect that when the rolls were called not one was missing.

At the same armory were Colonel Stover and his regimental staff, and the Fifth's supply company of the thirty-six men.

K and M companies of the Eighth, at Somerville, mobilized shortly after 8 o'clock today. To facilitate the work, Captain George S. Penney of M company ordered seven blows from the fire whistles at 6 and again at 6:30 a. m. The police also assisted in getting out the men.

Both companies are recruited to full peace footing.

The machine gun detachment of the Fifth Regiment, composed of residents of Winthrop, were mobilized at their armory, Court street, under command of Lieutenant Richmond J. Stoehr at 8 o'clock today, save for four men who are out of town. Lieutenant Stoehr has eight sergeants and six corporals in his outfit, which comprises forty-seven men. They are now awaiting orders from Colonel Willis W. Stover, the regimental commander.

C Company, Fifth Regiment, assembled at the West Newton armory with full strength of sixty-five men, under Captain H. D. Comeras, before 8 o'clock.

The fire alarm sounded the military call at 5:30 today and was characterized by the telephone operations for enlistment were received from former members.

The officials of the Newton Federation of Woman's Club, which conducts a dental clinic for school children, offered the services of Dr. A. M. Marshall to the company.

F Company of the Fifth, at Waltham, was out in record time. Of a total strength of fifty-nine, fifty-seven responded, the other two being out of the State.

AUTOS VOLUNTEERED

Three members of the American Legion volunteered autos, which were used in getting the men to the armory.

Before 7:30 a. m. three former members of the company applied for reenlistment, and later half a dozen other new men made application for enrolment.

Although the militia of the various States cannot be ordered beyond the Mexican border, or National Guard, the enlistment of the individuals into the United States Volunteers is a mere formality to be complied with either in mobilization camps or at the front, and of less hindrance than the furnishing the men food.

The fact that these students here of the Harvard senior class who are members of militia companies, and these men will be called away from Cambridge before they can get their degrees.

That the Harvard students may be sent toward the war zone in Mexico before they get their degrees does not worry them. The sheepskins are already made out and waiting for Thursday to come. The many students in the other Harvard classes who are affiliated with the militia are not disturbed in the thought that, so far as their academic work is concerned, for they will undoubtedly be granted their degrees by Harvard University if they remain in service for a year or more.

Call Out Cambridge Men at Early Hour.

Mayor Wendell D. Rockwood visited the Cambridge armory at 6 a. m. to make a general inspection.

The first call for mobilization was sent out at 6:02 a. m. and the second closely followed the first at 6:22.

Everything was found to be in perfect order, as forty or fifty officers and men had spent the night in the armory prepared for the call which they knew was to come.

At 3:30 a. m. Captain A. R. Brown, in command, sent Lieutenant Harry Ingram about the city in his automobile rounding up members of Company A. There was a quick response, and at 5 o'clock, when a roll call was taken, there were three officers and fifty men of Company A, three officers and sixty-one men of Company C and forty-eight men with three officers of Company E. There was also a machine gun company and a hospital corps.

In the absence of Colonel Graves, Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Perry took command.

Many new recruits have offered to enlist, the number at noon exceeding sixty.

The Cambridge City Guard Veteran Corps, through Major F. J. McNamara, offered their services in any helpful way, while the militia is absent. The Cambridge Business Men's Company also offered its services.

Many volunteer automobiles were placed at the service of army officers.

Harvard Oarsman Quits to Join Colors

Red Top, Ct., June 19.—Fears that the mobilization orders to the militia of the country might disrupt the Harvard crews formed the chief topic of gossip at quarters today following the departure of Francis Parkman, bow oar in the Harvard freshman boat, to join his company in the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry.

It is stated that several others of the crew are expecting orders. When the freshmen went out for morning practice Parkman's place was taken by Howard, and Isley Cobb was tried in the bow seat. The other crews were unchanged.

Connecticut Needs More Militiamen

By International News Service.

Hartford, Ct., June 19.—Governor Marcus H. Holcomb said this afternoon he had issued the necessary orders and done everything in his power to carry out the War Department orders, but he thought several companies of the First Regiment were under the minimum strength and would have to stay in Niantic, until recruited up.

Governor Holcomb reached his office at 7:30 today and sent for Adjutant General Cole. It developed that the telegram from Washington ordering mobilization had not been delivered and it was sent for from a local telegraph office. Upon its arrival Governor Holcomb ordered Adjutant General Cole to order the Connecticut troops to mobilize in a general order for 8 o'clock tomorrow.

Governor Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts then called at the office with his aide, Harry C. Martin, and after a conference the two governors and the adjutant general and the aide-de-camp were photographed together.

Governor Holcomb and Governor McCall left for Trinity College where Governor McCall received a degree. At the State armory the Adjutant-General said that the militiamen would be ordered to their home headquarters tomorrow and when they were in readiness they would be ordered respectively to the armories in New Haven and Hartford and thence to Niantic to await the call of the government for their services.

The mobilization plans include the two regiments of infantry, the six field artillery batteries, the signal corps, field hospital and ambulance companies. The order will exclude Company A of field artillery and the first separate company, a colored organization.

Near-Panic Follows Bells in Manchester.

Manchester, N. H., June 19.—The city of Manchester was thrown almost into a panic today when at 11 a. m. all the bells of the city sounded the military call.

Before the peals from a dozen belfries had died away hundreds of employes of the Amoskeag mills, in shoe factories and in banks and stores dropped their work and proceeded pell-mell to the State Armory on Pleasant street.

Conductors and motormen on the Manchester street railway left their cars at standstill in the streets and hurried to join their companies.

Six fire companies responded and left the local fire fighting force short-handed.

For an hour or so business was at a standstill, while thousands of calls were made their way to the armory to see what it all meant.

Musicians who belong the the military band laid down their violins, trombones and drums at various theatres and were soon a part of the small army mobilizing on Pleasant street. Manchester is now practically musicless.

Companies that assembled at the armory were any of their full complement and immediately a recruiting station was opened. Within an hour every company was recruited to a war footing. The increase was from about 90 to 150.

Colonel Healy, commander of the First New Hampshire Infantry, said the troops would sleep in the armory tonight and leave for the mobilization camp at Concord tomorrow morning.

To Authorize Use of Militia in Mexico

By International News Service.

Washington, June 19.—The Administration today arranged with Congressional leaders specifically to authorize the use of the organized militia as an offensive force on Mexican soil.

Secretary of War Baker communicated to Chairman Hay of the House Military Affairs committee, and Senator Chamberlain of the same committee in the Senate the desire for specific congressional action that would make clear the intention of the war department to send the militiamen outside the borders of the United States and into Mexico.

Some administration advisers opposed the specific authorization suggested by Secretary Baker, declaring it would be accepted by the Mexican people as a flat declaration of war. Secretary Baker told them that this matter had been considered and that the administration believed the prospect of such a resolution would not further complicate the situation.

Chairman Hay, after talking with Secretary Baker, said that a joint resolution specially authorizing the President to use the militia outside of the territorial limits of the United States would be introduced and put through the channels of Congress to meet Secretary Baker's demand.

"The War Department seems to think," said Representative Hay, "that under the law the President needs specific congressional authorization in order to legalize the use of the militia organizations outside of the boundaries of the United States. Secretary Baker has suggested the passage of a joint resolution carrying this authorization. Such a resolution will be passed and will undoubtedly have the unanimous support of both houses, since the administration believes it necessary.

"The only thing before the administration has ample authority to send the militia anywhere in Mexico at present."

New Hampshire Ready to Move in 12 Hours

Concord, N. H., June 19.—The mobilization of the New Hampshire militia was begun today.

After an all-night auto race from Hanover, where he had received the President's orders while attending the Dartmouth commencement, Adjutant-General Charles W. Howard reached this city at 7:30 today, and at once went into conference with militia officers on mobilization plans.

The call to the regimental commanders went forth this afternoon, and the regiments will assemble on the encampment field by tomorrow, or Wednesday at the latest.

The First regiment of militia now totals 1,500 officers and men. Its war strength is 1,850.

There are four companies at Manchester, two at Nashua, two at Keene two in this city, one in Newport, one at Berlin, a machine gun company at Laconia, Battery A at Manchester, Troop A at Peterboro, and the Signal Corps at Milford.

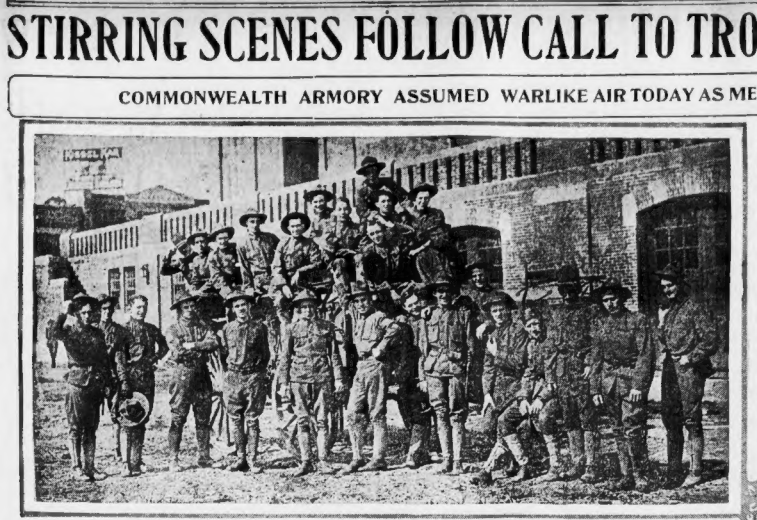
STIRRING SCENES FOLLOW CALL TO TROOPS AT NEW COMMONWEALTH ARMORY

COMMONWEALTH ARMORY ASSUMED WARLIKE AIR TODAY AS MEN IN MOUNTED DIVISIONS OF STATE MILITIA ANSWERED THE CALL



Members of Ambulance Corps No. 1, M. V. M., gathered about an ambulance wagon today at the Commonwealth avenue armory, all ready to leave for the field.

Members of Ambulance Corps No. 1 hauling one of the hospital wagons out of the Commonwealth avenue armory in preparation for real business.

CAVALRY AND FIELD ARTILLERY RESPOND

The new Commonwealth Armory on Commonwealth avenue, next to Braves Field, was the scene of probably the greatest and most diverse activity of any of the militia assembly points in the entire State.

This big armory is brigade headquarters not only for the First and Second Brigades but also for four separate and important bodies of the militia. These are the cavalry, field artillery, field hospital and signal corps.

All these bodies, totalling hundreds of men, were reporting through the night, and all mustered practically full commands by mid-morning.

LINE OF RUSHING AUTOS.

There was a tremendous bustle all through the armory, from the brigade headquarters down. Telephones were going ceaselessly. Typewriters were clicking as orders were being received or made out. Equipment of all kinds, from uniforms to field artillery, was being brought out and made ready for wear or departure.

Automobiles kept dashing up, laden with one or more men, mainly officers. Privates kept arriving on foot or by trolley. Transfer wagons kept bringing officers' trunks—not to be taken along with the officers, but containing camp outfits and accessories not kept at the armory.

There was even enlisting, as some applicants for the cavalry service appeared and were examined. The four troops of the First Squadron of Cavalry run to about 80 men apiece at present, but they can enlist up to 100. So any eligibles were eagerly received.

Civilians from the Allston and Brookline districts, interested in the militia mobilization, gathered along the avenue front watching the mobilization. In all there was a busy and efficient clatter.

Even "Solomon," the mascot owl of J. L. Lynch, electrician of Company A, Signal Corps, looked unusually solemn, emitting an occasional hoot as though he was wide-awake, even in the daytime, to the tremendous occasion.

This armory is the official headquarters of Brigadier-General George H. Priest of the First Brigade and Brigadier-General F. V. Leroy Sweetser of the Second brigade and their staffs, so the staff quarters were filled early with officers handing orders and attending to the innumerable executive details of the mobilization.

ORDERS FOR CAVALRY.

The cavalry received mobilization orders early. Practically all the men appeared. The squadron officers are Major Charles A. Schmitz, in command, First Lieutenant John W. Hall, adjutant; First Lieutenant Stewart Wise, inspector small arms practice; Second Lieutenant Leroy H. Robbins, quartermaster and commissary.

There are four cavalry troops in the First Squadron, comprising all the cavalry in the State militia. The troops and their commanding officers are: Troop A, Captain John Kenny; Troop B, Captain Charles T. Levering; Troop C, Captain Dana T. Gallup; Troop D, Captain Charles H. Ferguson.

Company A, Signal Corps, in charge of Major Harry G. Chase and directly under Captain S. Stewart Smith, assembled in good season. The company includes four sections of fourteen men each. There and the officers make a total of 64, all mounted.

The equipment of the signal corps company includes four wire carts, each carrying five miles of wire, radio outfit, tractor set and other signalling apparatus. Captain Smith and the other officers were on hand early. The wire wagons were drawn out from the armory into the big yard. Tents, blankets and other paraphernalia were set out.

ARTILLERY MEN OUT EARLY.

Commonwealth Armory is an important field artillery point for it is the headquarters of the two battalions and of Battery A, First Battalion.

Captain Edward B. Richardson of Battery A received his assembling orders at 7 o'clock. There are 133 men in his command. They began arriving in good season. The equipment of the four-gun and two-gun caisson sections were put in shape for instant start.

Field Hospital Company No. 1, Major John D. R. Woodworth, includes 54 men. By 9 o'clock all were on hand except one, Captain Frederick A. King and Lieutenants Morgan, Andrews and Williams superintended the details of getting the equipment out.

Ambulance Company No. 1, under Captains George F. Keenan, Leonard W. Hassett and First Lieutenant Frederick W. O'Brien, received its assembly orders at 1 a. m. In a half-hour the first member of the company appeared. By breakfast time sixty-six out of the entire sixty-seven men in the ambulance unit were on hand.

There was, of course, a great absence of horses on account of the State not supplying steeds to cavalry and officers. The artillery owns sixteen horses, which are stabled in the armory. About 100 of the cavalry troopers own horses, which are stabled at the armory. Others are hired when necessary. The cavalry horses have been out at the officers' camp in South Sudbury, but were brought in through the day.

Cole Races Home on "Paul Revere" Ride

Brigadier General Charles H. Cole, adjutant general, proved a modern Paul Revere, traveling in 1916 by auto and steam cars. Spending the week end at Ashland, N. H., with Colonel Edward L. Logan and Lieutenant Colonel William B. Emery, he learned of the call to the militia. He made a dash for Boston, having an express train held at Concord, N. H., for several minutes to enable him to make the connection for Boston.

"I received a telephone call from a Boston newspaper man telling me that the militia had been called out," said General Cole. "Colonel Logan and Colonel Emery and myself secured an automobile in Ashland, and started to burn up the ground to Concord, N. H., where there was an express due for Boston in a short time. We telephoned ahead that we were coming, and that it was imperative that we catch that train.

"When we arrived at the station in Concord the station agent was waiting. He ran up to me and asked me if I was the adjutant-general. I told him I was. He handed me a telegram informing me that the militia was to be mobilized. The express train, in the meantime had got tired of waiting and was just pulling out of the station. The agent, however, set the signals and stopped it in the yard, and we three got on board. The train made up its lost time, too, in getting to Boston.

"I immediately summoned my official force, including the stenographers. The telephone was used, and within a very short time the mobilization machine was at work."

New Bedford Men Trained for March

New Bedford, June 19.—Captain John A. Stitt of the Fourth Company, Coast Artillery Corps, with headquarters at New Bedford, said today:

"We are all ready and could move out on six hours' notice. I have received no orders so far. We have seventy-three men now out of a full strength of seventy-five on a peace basis. On a war footing the company would require 150 men. The men have their equipment in their lockers at the armory. All they would need to do would be to get it and get out.

"The company has had a lot of 'preparedness' work of late, with week-end hikes and camp duty. Twenty of them went out hiking and camping last Saturday and returned at 4:30 this morning. The company officers returned Saturday from camp duty at Fort Rodman."

Lynn Companies at Full Strength

Lynn, June 19—Companies D and I of the Eighth regiment, Lynn, received the call for mobilization at 12:30 this morning, and by 7 o'clock were assembled at the State Armory, in command of Captain Thomas J. Cobey of Company D and Lieutenant Frederick Needham of Company I.

At 7 o'clock the military call was sounded on the fire alarm, calling in all the men who had not been reached previously. As both outfits are at present recruited to nearly full peace strength, it is expected that they will be among the first to leave for Framingham.

Rush to Enlist in Many Cities

In many cities there was a rush to enlist. In Everett more than a hundred young men stood for hours in front of the armory, and finally at the first chance, made known their desire to enroll in B Company of the Eighth Regiment.

They were informed that immediate enlistment was impossible in the company, as it is recruited to full peace strength. Their names and addresses, however, were taken, with the suggestion that they would be kept as a waiting list.

It was announced as a probability that a new company would be organized in Everett as a result of the large number of names listed today.

Company B was mobilized shortly before 7:30 a. m. today, with every man on hand except one, who was out of town on a vacation.

At Woburn a number of young men enlisted in G Company of the Fifth Regiment, Captain Fred Kean. The company was mobilized by 8 a. m.

L Company of the Fifth, of Malden, Captain C. David Berg, was mobilized by 7:30 a. m.

In Medford, at headquarters of E Company of the Fifth, a score or more sought enlistment, saying that they were anxious to go.

On the call from Captain Robert L. Magee, the company mobilized rapidly.

Major Orville J. Whitney was at the armory for a time, and later went to regimental headquarters in Charlestown.

Four Companies Under Arms in Springfield

Springfield, June 19.—Four companies of the famous Second Massachusetts mobilized here by daylight this morning and are now awaiting orders at the State Armory.

When the companies arrived at the armory they were met by large numbers of men who wanted to enlist. Many of them have already seen service.

The companies are B, G and K, all of Springfield, and D of Holyoke. They were called out in the middle of the night by sounding the military call on the fire alarm. To make sure that the call should be heard, arrangements were made to sound it on the whistles of many mills and factories, and Western Massachusetts was thrown into excitement when bells, whistles and the regular fire alarm sounded the call, beginning at 2 o'clock this morning.

Colonel William C. Hayes is commanding the regiment, and he announced today that no one would be enlisted until the arrival of the medical officers.

RUSH NEW MEXICAN ARMY

El Paso, Texas, June 18—Persistent reports here during the day are that fresh reinforcements of Mexican troops have arrived in Juarez, but the Mexicans are finding themselves greatly embarrassed through the lack of railway facilities for the shipment of men and supplies. They lack locomotives, cars and coal. The railroads are also in wretched condition, having been repeatedly torn up during the revolutions of the past five years.

By PERCY THOMAS.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

El Paso, Texas, June 19.—General Francisco Serrano, chief of staff to General Alvaro Obregon, the Minister of War in the de facto government of Mexico, has arrived in Juarez.

This is considered one of the most significant of the recent developments in the tense Mexican situation.

Next to Obregon, Serrano is considered one of the ablest generals at the head of the Carranza army.

Military men on the American side of the border believe that General Serrano has been designated to take supreme command of the Mexican forces in the north and to lead the active operations against the United States troops of Brigadier General John J. Pershing if hostilities break out.

News that President Wilson is putting the military forces of the United States on a war footing has caused intense excitement in towns in northern Mexico.

SEEK ARMY OF 500,000.

It is reported that Carranzista generals are at work stirring up to a still higher pitch the anti-American feeling.

Coincident with this report came news that General Venustiano Carranza, the first chief of the Constitutionalist party, and his Minister of War are trying to equip 500,000 Mexicans for military service.

Thirty already have heavy forces at strategic points in Chihuahua, Sonora and Coahuila. The Mexicans further have the advantage of knowing the mountainous country better than the Americans. Serrano has the reputation of knowing every inch of soil in northern Mexico like a book.

Citizens living in United States border towns believe that hostilities are imminent. Private stores of arms, ammunition and supplies are being placed at the disposal of Major-General Funston. Mexicans are being watched closely to prevent them from smuggling supplies over the border.

Villa Ahumada, south of Juarez, has become a great military camp. It is estimated that there are about five thousand de facto troops there and 20,000 more in the intervening territory between Casas Grandes and Villa Ahumada.

These troops are said to be well supplied with guns and ammunition, and should hostilities begin they would be in a position to menace seriously Brigadier General Pershing's lines of communication.

REPORT ULTIMATUM.

Although unconfirmed it is generally believed that General Carranza has sent an ultimatum announcing that unless the United States soldiers are withdrawn from Mexican soil he will announce that a state of war exists between Mexico and the United States. One report states that the time limit is seven days, others that it is ten days.

It is feared, however, that the American-hating generals in Carranza's army will not have the patience to wait to see if the difficulties can be adjusted but will set out "to start something" forthwith.

General Pershing has sufficient stores to last his troops for several weeks, and there is a feeling of supreme confidence that he can take care of himself and his men.

There are now 3,500 troops in the Fort Bliss garrison, but reinforcements are expected, which will bring the complement up to 5,000 men or more.

There is plenty of ammunition on hand, for both small arms and artillery.

Agitation has been started in favor of a food blockade against Mexico. Purchases of corn, rye, sugar, rice, flour and meat, which were purchased ostensibly to relieve famine conditions, are known to have found their way into the commissary department of Carranza's army.

Louis Corpeon, an officer in the Carranza army, who was caught while trying to smuggle 800 rounds of ammunition across the Rio Grande, as well as several machine guns, is detained at Fort Bliss.

Mexican consuls, evidently believing that war will come, are leaving for Mexico. Andres Garcia, Mexican consul at El Paso, has gone to Juarez.

General George Bell, Jr., commanding the United States forces in El Paso, is determined not to be caught napping. The patrol at the international bridge and other points have been strengthened and warned to exercise war time vigilance.

City Employes in Militia to Be Paid

With the calling out of the Massachusetts militia today for active service, employes of the city who are members of the militia learned for the first time that in all probability they will draw full pay from the city while they are gone.

This is on account of an order passed in the City Council on April 25. The order was intended to apply to Grand Army and Spanish War veterans so that they might receive full pay while attending encampments of their associations and to those others who might wish to attend Platisburg and other training camps.

However the order is so worded that in the opinion of the mayor it will apply to all those called into active service as well.

The order states that it applies to those who attend any "movement which is intended to improve the military defences of the United States," and this, in the opinion of the mayor, means that city employes will entitled to draw full pay from the city while in the service of the United States.

Among the members of the militia, in the city service, who have been ordered to report for military duty are:

Sergeant John F. Fitzgerald, signal corps, Dr. Carl Bailey, medical corps, Eighth Regiment; Dr. John O'Donohue, Troop C, of the Health Department; Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Dunn, Ninth Regiment, chairman of Street Commissioners; Sergeant George E. Willard, Fifth Regiment, Public Work Department; Sergeant John J. Murphy, medical corps, Ninth Regiment, assistant Mayor's secretary; Major William J. Casey, Ninth Regiment, Superintendent Printing Plant; Private James J. Dolan, Co. K, Eighth Regiment, Printing Department; Private Bernard Graham, Fifth Regiment, Private Thomas J. Donnelly, Ninth Regiment and Drum Major James J. Coughlin, Fifth Regiment, of the Park and Recreation Department.

Three Waltham Women First to "Mobilize" at Call of the President

PROBABLY the first women in the State to "mobilize" in response to the call of the President were Mrs. Sidney Brown and two friends of Waltham.

Mrs. Brown is the wife of Captain Brown of F Company of the Fifth Regiment.

The three women were on hand before the company had fully mobilized and offered to do whatever they could to expedite the work.

And then the three preparedness women spent the forenoon sewing buttons on the uniforms.

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that, according to Dr. Lewis, there is real hope for you. Many who have worn glasses for years say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after using it: "I was almost blind; could scarcely see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear." I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. Then by use of a medicine dropper bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family. Sold by all Liggett-Rexall Stores.

UNITED STATES WILL INTERVENE IN MEXICO UNLESS CARRANZA BACKS DOWN

PREPARE TO PACIFY SOUTHERN REPUBLIC

"This is desired to prevent possible conflicts between the military of the two nations.

"Our advices concerning the Mazatlan fight, received from General Mezta, commandant of Mazatlan, stated that a launch bearing American naval officers and men approached the shore, and were warned off, being told they could not land until the Mexican officers had communicated with Mexico City. The launch went away and a few hours later returned, with all the occupants armed.

"Upon the second approach a drunken Japanese fired upon the American civilians, and they, believing the Mexicans were doing the firing, opened fire upon our forces, wounding two Mexican soldiers and one Mexican civilian. Two American officers then landed from the launch and were arrested. A consultation was held and both sides agreed that the conflict was brought on by the Japanese. Then the Americans were released, and all returned to the ship."

A copy of the administration's call for the militia as issued yesterday was delivered to the Mexican embassy and immediately forwarded to Mexico City, stating that the militia was to be used only for border duty and was not intended for reinforcing the Pershing expedition inside Mexico.

The United States today was preparing for any eventuality in Mexico. Light draught warships were being assembled along the east and west coasts of the revolution-worn republic.

The entire strength of the mobile National Guard of the nation was being assembled in mobilization camps ready for active duty along the border.

No precaution was being overlooked that would place the country in readiness for a state of war with the de facto government of Mexico or to protect at any cost the southern boundary lines.

Yesterday while every movement spelled war, the administration officials insisted that their actions were entirely precautionary. If war must come—and there are few who believe that it can be averted—then the administration intends placing the responsibility upon General Carranza and his advisers.

Reports that President Wilson was planning asking for a joint session of Congress before which he could lay all of the facts in the Mexican situation and ask for advice were denied at the White House. It was stated that this question had not yet been considered. The President, it was said, has no desire to inject politics into the situation if it can be avoided and will go before Congress only when all other means of relief have been exhausted.

The President and many of his advisers were hopeful that the calling out of the National Guard for border service would impress the Mexican officials with the fact that the administration means business and check the hotheads in the Carranza service, who have been advocating attacking the Americans.

LOOK FOR WAR.

But the chiefs of the army and navy do not expect this. They believe that the tottering Carranza government wants war with the United States in the hope that through such action he (Carranza) can solidify all Mexicans in his behalf. And the War College is going ahead with its plans for a real campaign in Mexico on this basis.

Although reports continue to reach Washington painting the Pershing punitive expedition as in danger and surrounded on all sides by a mighty force of armed Mexicans, awaiting the signal to perpetrate "another Custer massacre," the officials at the War Department say that Pershing can take care of himself. His troops are in strong positions. They have plenty of arms and munitions as well as other supplies. And they are just spoiling for a fight with the Mexican troops who are vastly inferior to them in equipment, no matter how superior in point of numbers.

The quick response of the National Guard to the order to mobilize has gratified all officials here. From the various States comes the word that the men are turning up at their armories ready to be mustered into the service of the United States. And although the provisions of the Hay-Chamberlain bill do not go into effect until the first of next month, many of the organizations have expressed a desire to be mustered in under the provisions rather than under the present Dick law.

It is understood that the first units to be ordered South will be crack regiments from the Northern States all of whom are ready for active service right now. Under orders from the War Department, however, details regarding troop movements will be withheld.

War Department officials say that the general equipment of the entire guard today is equal to what it was the last couple of months all units have had their equipment brought up-to-date with everything that would be required for field service.

MOTOR TRUCKS NEEDED.

The army needs—in fact, the only serious need—is transport equipment, such as auto trucks, and the like. The quartermaster's department will do everything possible to remedy this and auto trucks will be procured at every possible point without delay.

When Secretary Lansing was asked today regarding the outlook, he said:

"There has been no change in our policy toward Mexico."

Under questioning the secretary admitted that there is more excitement and irritation in Mexico, than at any time since the Villa raid on Columbus, N. M., and that there are many evidences of anti-American feeling at numerous points.

Secretary Lansing admitted that the few remaining American consuls still in Mexico have been ordered again to warn Americans to leave for the United States without delay.

Neither the State nor the Navy Department today had any confirmation of a fight between Mexicans and Americans at Mazatlan.

Fire Whistle Calls Lawrence Militia

Lawrence, June 19.—The three militia organizations of this city and the field officers residing here were mobilized this morning. Major Thorndike D. Howe of the Second Battalion, Field Artillery, left early today for Salem to take charge of his command and Major Frank L. Donovan of the third battalion of the Ninth Regiment also left for his command.

F Company of the Ninth, under Captain Jeremiah J. Sullivan, and I, Company of the Eight, under Captain Daniel C. Smith, are both waiting at their armory in Amesbury street for orders. C Battery, under Captain W. W. Roberts, is also mobilized at their armory on the Methuen road.

The men were summoned to the armories by the military call on the fire whistle at 6:30 this morning, and in a short time a majority of the men had reported.

Big Crowds Gather at Lowell Armory.

Lowell, June 19.—M Company, 9th Regiment, arrived early at the armory, sixty-four strong.

First Lieutenant and acting Captain Daniel E. Christian is in command of Company M until a new captain is elected. There has been no captain since Captain McNulty resigned.

Streets about the armory have assumed a warlike aspect, with bugles calling, drums beating and hundreds of citizens assembling about the armory doors.

Order of Cleanliness in Armory and Camp

Mobilization Orders, No. 2, pertaining to the instruction of cavalry, infantry and sanitary troops were issued from the adjutant-general's office this morning.

These orders contain programs to be followed in armories and camp, according to military regulations, and direct the activities of a soldier from the rising of the sun until the going down of the same.

The necessity of cleanliness and sanitation is strongly emphasized, and every man is required to bathe at least twice a week, with daily washing of the legs, feet and other parts of the body.

To cavalrymen horsemanship is the first requisite, according to the orders, and instruction in this must commence at once and continue until the troops enter a campaign. The Massachusetts troops have, of course, had considerable practice, but the instruction will be continued in an effort to make them finished riders.

The second requisite of a cavalryman is said to be the ability to hit on the battlefield what he shoots at, and the next in order is care of his horse, his arms and equipment and himself.

The mobilization orders then go into details regarding the instruction to be given the men in small arms firing and care, horsemanship, general hygiene, packing, respect to officers and non-commissioned officers, mounted drill and training and many other duties.

The infantry instructions are along the same lines as applied to infantry services, and the sanitary troops are to be instructed at great length on field sanitation, including care of latrines, purification of water, disposal of wastes, personal hygiene and disease prevention, ambulance work, first aid and the care of animals. The importance of calisthenics is also emphasized.

Chaplain Among First at the East Armory

The East Armory at No. 75 East Newton street was a busy place today when members of the Ninth Regiment having reported at an early hour, with 150 volunteers.

The volunteers responded to a call issued by Colonel Edward L. Logan of the regiment, who asked for sufficient recruits to swell the strength of the regiment to a war footing, or 150 men to the company.

Practically the full strength of Companies A, B, C, E and H reported early in the morning.

Prominent among those early at the armory was the Rev. M. J. O'Connor, chaplain of the regiment.

The first volunteer to report this morning was Robert Morrill, a street car conductor attached to Division 7, Cambridge, who was assigned to Company H.

The first officer to report was Lieutenant James J. Flannagan of Brookline street, followed by Lieutenants Robert Hayes of Company I and Richard Shea, Jr., of the same company.

Many a Boston mother today kept an anxious eye on "Johnnie" to see that he did not carry out an expressed intention of enlisting in the militia. Among the recruits at the East Armory were many boys below enlistment age. Several of these were collared by their mothers and marched straight home.

Mothers of about a dozen boys who had been accepted appealed to the recruiting officer of the Ninth to investigate the ages given by boys.

Gloucester Company Thinks It Made Record

Gloucester, June 19.—The Gloucester boys—Company G of the Fifth—would like to know if any other company beat their early morning mobilization record. Captain John E. Parker had his company of sixty-seven officers and men, except four, assembled at the armory on Prospect street, fully equipped and ready to start for Framingham or even the border at 5:30 a. m.

Captain Parker thinks that may be pretty near the best time set by any Massachusetts company.

Captain Parker received telegraphic orders in the night to assemble his men at the armory. His brother First Lieutenant William S. Webber and, with him, roused the non-commissioned officers. The men were hustled around after the men. Telephones were used and a dozen automobiles were pressed into service to expedite the assembly, for some of the men live in Rockport and other towns outside the city.

Private John Perry of Lynn is a fireman on the Boston & Maine. He was intercepted at the Salem railroad station, where the train had just stopped on its way to Portland. Just as the train pulled out Perry came to a start in an automobile dashed up. Perry was called from his engine into the auto. Then the machine made a bee line for Gloucester and the Boston & Maine train had to dig up a substitute fireman as best it could.

Of the four men who were not on hand at the armory, two were out fishing. Messengers were sent for them. One was in Springfield. The fourth was in Lynn and was reported on his way to Gloucester.

At 6:45 a. m. the militia call, ten rounds sounded three times on the fire alarm, was given. This notified the citizens generally that the militia had been called. It brought a crowd into Prospect street, but the militiamen or other authorized persons were admitted to the armory proper.

With his men all ready to start Captain Parker awaited further orders. He said that, in the absence of Colonel Frank A. Graves of the Eighth, his commanding officer was Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Perry of Lynn. Colonel Graves went to Canada recently for a rest, but the militia calls and other new wrinkles of war, as shown in the Canadian mobilization camps.

Great Rush of Men to Enlist in Worcester.

Worcester, June 19.—So great was the rush to enlist here today that before noon the recruiting officers had to open enemancy in the local militia companies.

Fully 500 young men gathered outside the armory, and most of them apparently were eager to enroll. In addition to these, there are numerous former members of the militia who want to re-enlist, and preference will be given to these, it is thought.

Before 11 a. m. today all members of Companies A, C and H of the Second and G Company of the Ninth and Battery B of the First Field Artillery had either responded to the mobilization call or were accounted for.

Captain Frederick Lucke of A Company was reached by long-distance in Aroostook County, in Maine, where he has been on a fishing trip. He responded by motoring to the nearest railroad station and taking the first train home.

Captain John F. J. Herbert of Battery B, first field artillery, received orders from Adjutant General Cole this afternoon to proceed at once to recruit the battery up to full war strength.

Work was begun immediately, and in a short time Captain Herbert had received 53 applications for enlistment.

Captain Herbert was also ordered to hire horses for the battery with an option for purchase.

Today's Developments in the Mexican Crisis

Congress asked to make all provisions of Hay-Chamberlain bill immediately effective so that National Guard now being mobilized specifically can be used for service in Mexico.

Carranza, through Ambassador Arredondo, demands that no American bluejackets or marines be permitted to land on Mexican soil.

Mobilization of National Guard in pursuance to President's call going on with record rapidity.

Secretary Lansing admits that the few remaining American consuls in Mexico again warn Americans to leave.

State Department denies any change in Mexican situation and is prepared to place responsibility for any break directly at Carranza's door.

Mexican Embassy says drunken Japanese fired on American naval launch at Mazatlan; that Americans thinking Mexicans to blame, fired, wounding two Mexicans; two American officers injured later.

War Department officials declare General Pershing can take care of himself in event of any serious hostilities.

United States reply sent to Carranza note of May 22 demanding withdrawal of troops. It refuses to withdraw troops until de facto government conclusively proves it can handle situation, and warns Carranza against overt acts which may precipitate trouble.

Men at Harvard Call Off Plans.

Many of Harvard's plans have been interrupted by the call sent out for militiamen to mobilize at Framingham.

Among those who have already been compelled to cancel engagements are LeBaron R. Briggs, son of Dean Briggs; Samuel Almy, son of Judge Almy of Cambridge; James K. Selden, captain of the football team; Captain B. C. Cartnell, track team; Clifford F. Farrington, cross country team; Richard A. Whiting, manager of swimming team; John F. T. Penhallow, Edward M. Peter, Thomas K. Fisher and Thomas F. Eckfeldt, the two last of the hockey team. These men reported at various armories early today.

Leave of Absence at Yale for Boat Race

New Haven, Ct., June 19.—Fears that the call for the militia for border service might disrupt the Yale crew, four of whose members are also members of the Yale battery, were set at rest today when members of the Yale rowing committee got into touch with Attorney Lucius F. Robinson of Hartford, who interviewed Adjutant General George M. Cole and was informed by that official that leave of absence to the Yale crew would be granted if necessary that they might row in the race with Harvard on Friday.

Before this tentative arrangements were being made to row the varsity race at New London, if necessary rather than call it off.

Rhode Island Militia Ordered Into Camp

Providence, June 19.—Governor R. Livingston Beeckman today ordered the State's quota of militia to start for Quonset Point training ground at sunrise.

Captain Robert Davis, U. S. A., accompanied the battery, which was in command of Captain E. S. Casey.

The ambulance corps, Captain Herbert H. Arrington, with 53 men, is reported to be in first class condition, with 12 ambulances, 2 escort wagons, 4 pack mules and 14 litters.

Captain Herbert R. Dean of Troop A announced that his cavalrymen were in readiness to start at moments notice.

Adjutant General Charles W. Abbott, Jr., said that he had 1,750 men in the State militia, who he could send to the border if necessary.

Governor Beeckman today began making arrangements for the opening of recruiting stations in the principal cities of the State.

Salem Companies Respond to Call.

Salem, June 19.—Company B of the 8th Regiment mobilized at the State armory early today with sixty members and three officers, under command of Captain Chester Stone.

Three companies, D, E and F, of the Second Corps Cadets, field artillery, assembled under the command of Major Thorndike D. Howe. There are 350 in these three companies now waiting orders.

CARRANZA WILL LEAD ARMY IF WAR COMES

Mexico City, June 19.—General Carranza, addressing a mass meeting in front of his residence last night, urged the citizens to refrain from hostile acts against Americans and declared that he had hopes of peacefully arranging the difficulties between Mexico and the United States.

The First Chief said in part:

"This is not the time for hasty action. I am trying to arrange our difficulties with the United States officially and have hopes of succeeding. I want you to aid me.

"The encounter between American soldiers and Mexicans near Matamoras has been temporarily solved with the withdrawal of American troops from that region. The matter is now being taken up diplomatically. There was some trouble in Mazatlan, caused by the intrusion of an American sailor, and that has been adjusted for the time being.

"Go to your homes and be good Mexicans, remembering also that I will do my utmost to preserve the dignity of the Mexican nation. If we are forced to resort to arms I will lead you in person."

GENERAL PIERCE OFFERS SERVICES

Greenfield, June 19.—General Frederick D. Pierce, retired, today wired Adjutant-General Cole an offer of his services in the Mexican crisis. General Pierce formerly served in the Second Regiment, M. V. M.

JAPS INCREASE STRENGTH IN PACIFIC

By International News Service.

New York, June 19.—Two American passenger liners will shortly leave this port to augment the steadily climbing mercantile supremacy of the Japanese in the Pacific. They are the former Pacific mail steamers Siberia and Corea.

These vessels were recently purchased by the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Steamship Company for a price said to be $2,000,000 each.

The Siberia is loading in this port today and will probably sail for San Francisco, by way of the canal, this week. On arrival at the Pacific port she will be transferred to the Japanese flag.

The Corea is also loading here. She will, however, make a trip to London before going to San Francisco to be transferred to the Japanese flag.

Officers of the vessel said today they believed the Japanese, following their usual custom, would keep one American officer on the two vessels, but replace all the others as well as the crew with Japanese.

The Siberia and Corea have been eleven years in the Pacific trade under the American flag. They were originally constructed at about $1,000,000 each. Despite the natural depreciation, the present demand for shipping enabled the owners to realize about twice the original cost for them.

Shipping men declared today the operation of the La Follette seamans' act will greatly aid the Japanese in developing their merchant marine in the Pacific, as American ship owners, under its terms, could not afford to compete.

Ordered to Mexico, Sailor Hurries for License to Marry

The Mexican crisis may speed the ringing of wedding bells for Edward Hammond, an oiler on the U. S. S. Patterson, and Mrs. Angelina Murphy, a widow, of Roxbury.

As a result of orders to his ship to proceed to Mexican waters, Hammond, who is thirty-five, sought his fiancee's consent to an immediate tying of the knot.

She agreed, so Hammond and his fiancee went to City Hall. There they learned of the five-day law.

Hammond hurried to the Pemberton Square courthouse with his bride-to-be, to see if the five-day requisite could not be waived in view of his call to duty.

Mrs. Murphy gave her address as No. 15 Douglas street, Roxbury. She is a widow.

Waltham Asks Emergency Fund for Soldiers' Aid

A soldiers' aid fund amounting probably to $5,000 will be asked of the Waltham Board of Aldermen tonight at their regular meeting.

Eben J. Williams will make the request for an appropriation—to be called the Soldiers' Aid Fund; this money will be used to assist families of soldiers who are called to the front on the Mexican border. The proposed appropriation will act as an emergency fund. Private soldiers receive but fifty cents a day, and sergeants seven-five cents.

LAST WARNING TO U. S. FROM CARRANZA

Washington, June 19.—Information received here from El Paso that General Carranza, First Chief of the de facto government, had sent an ultimatum to President Wilson that if the American punitive expedition is not withdrawn from Mexican soil within seven days a state of war will be declared to exist, caused the biggest kind of a sensation in official circles.

The information that the Mexican people, under the control of General Carranza, who but a short time ago was supposed to be friendly to the United States and co-operating in movements to bring about peace, had laid down their def, is taken by those who know the situation to mean that open hostilities must inevitably follow the receipt of this challenge.

RUSSIANS NOW PUSH DRIVE TO LEMBERG; CZERNOWITZ FALLS

By International News Service.

Petrograd, June 19.—With Czernowitz in their hands the Russians are now driving on Lemberg with renewed vigor. They are less than forty miles from the latter city, according to information received here today from the front.

Russian forces are pressing across the Pruth River and are driving the Austro-Hungarians before them. The Austro-Hungarians are fleeing in disorder across the intervening fifty miles of territory in progress on account of dangerous lengthening of their lines of communication.

Hard fighting is in progress between the Russians and the Austrians in the region of General von Linsingen, which is defending the Teutonic line at Kovel.

In the fall of infantry fighting all along the front the Russians are violently bombarding the Austro-Hungarian and German lines. At some points it is estimated, the Russian batteries belch as many as ten thousand shells against a single objective during the course of a 24 hours' cannonading.

The capture of Czernowitz was admitted by Vienna in the following statement:

AUSTRIANS OUTNUMBERED.

"Our troops occupying the Czernowitz bridgehead yesterday were compelled to retire before the overwhelmed fire of a greatly superior force of Russians.

"During the night the Russians forced a passage of the Pruth at various points and entered Czernowitz. We evacuated the town."

Vienna also announces the repulse of Russian attacks at several points in Volhynia.

Petrograd declares that on General Brusiloff's front the Austro-Germans are desperately resisting and are making frequent counter-attacks adding: "However, we are repulsing them and continue our offensive, throwing our opponents back and capturing prisoners and material."

STORMED BRIDGEHEAD.

The troops under General Letchitsky stormed the Czernowitz bridgehead on the left bank of the Pruth. The Austrians blew up the bridges. The town of Czernowitz was occupied by the Russians after desperate fighting for the passages across the river. In the capture of the bridgehead the Slavs claim to have taken over 1,000 prisoners. Guns were captured at Czernowitz.

A violent battle is raging in the region of Halicz (Halitsch) on the Stry. Germans fighting on this front include units from the front in France.

Between the 4th and 11th of June General Kaledine's troops have captured 1,114 officers, 70,000 men, 80 guns, 236 machine guns and an enormous quantity of material, says Petrograd.

At the same time an infantry attack was delivered against the positions on Hill No. 321 on the eastern side of the river. Hill ... southwest of Fort Douaumont and south of the Haudremont quarry.

To the west of the Meuse the French positions at Le Mort Homme (Dead Man Hill), and Chattoncourt were under heavy shell fire all day Sunday and last night, being particularly intense after sunset.

The text of the French communique follows:

"South of the Somme a surprise attack of the enemy near Lihons was completely checked.

"On the left bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) the enemy has actively bombarded our positions in the slopes south of Lemont Homme and the region of Chatoncourt. Our artillery everywhere replied with certain fire that prevented the enemy from debouching from his trenches.

"On the right bank of the Meuse, a German attack directed against our position north of Hill 321 was repulsed by our fire.

"On the night of June 18-19, two of our air squadrons successfully bombarded the Vouziers railway station and barracks. Troop movements were under way at the depot at the time. One squadron dropped thirty-two projectiles of large calibre and the other twenty-five."

German Attack at Verdun Repulsed

By International News Service.

London, June 19.—There was an increase in the violence of German bombardment against the French positions west of the Meuse River last night, it was announced in today's communique of the French War Office.

At the same time an infantry attack was delivered against the positions on Hill No. 321 on the eastern side of the river. Hill ... southwest of Fort Douaumont and south of the Haudremont quarry.

To the west of the Meuse the

WAR SUMMARY

The outstanding feature of the day's war tidings is the fall of Czernowitz, prematurely reported by Petrograd as having been taken twice last week. The Russians now claim the capture, and the Austrians admit the evacuation, of the important city, which fell on Saturday.

This marks the chief gain to date in the Russian "drive." However, it does not mark any great advance in point of distance.

Petrograd again tells of the frantic flight, etc., of the Austrians, but Russia's allies furnish the grains of salt for the seasoning of such claims. Rome officially states that the Austrians are not withdrawing from the Italian front, indicating that Vienna does not see through the glass as darkly as does Petrograd.

Berlin reports the effectual checking of General Brusiloff's attempt on Kovel, and the capture of more than 3,500 Russians.

Successes are reported by Rome on the Austro-Italian front.

Worth watching are the developments in Greece. This small nation, though feeling the "pressure" of the allies, is apparently living up to the traditions that made Greece glorious two thousand or more years ago.

Not only did dispatches show the people to be supprting King Constantine, but Athens officially shows no intention of giving in to the allies' demands. London gives out the news that the allied demands are much stronger than the censor permits correspondents to state, and calls Greece "recalcitrant."

An Oxford University professor, lecturing in New York, gives a hint of the allied desires on the brave small nation in a statement that "Greece's place in the war is with the allies."

Despite the pressure of the Russians, the Germans are still on the offensive around Verdun. Paris claims the repulse of all attacks.

Sons of Israel Vote to Protest Literacy Test

Delegates attending the convention of the independent Order Sons of Israel at No. 47 Mt. Vernon street attacked the literacy test and voted that a protest against the Burnett immigration bill be forwarded to President Wilson and the members of the United States Senate.

A most important resolution adopted today was the one endorsing the American Jewish Congress plan on a democratic basis as devised by Justice Louis D. Brandeis, which aims to attain complete equal civil and political rights for the Jews in countries where these rights are denied to them. Considerable time was devoted to the discussion of the American Jewish Congress plan.

Loud and continuous applause followed the adoption of the resolution thanking President Wilson for his appointment of Louis D. Brandeis as associate justice of the United States Supreme Court. The passing of patriotic resolutions pledging wholehearted loyalty to the United States was also one of the features of today's session.

MERRIAM BEATS EXTRADITION; REARRESTED

Louis D. Merriam, who has been fighting extradition to Canada on a charge of snatching a $1,500 tray of diamonds from a Montreal jewelry store, was discharged today by order of the State Department, so far as the extradition case was concerned, but was immediately rearrested by patrolmen from Court Square station on a bench warrant issued on complaint from Kidder, Peabody & Co., the Boston bankers.

It was reported that the Kidder, Peabody people related to the time when a $5,000 note was hoodooed through the opening in the cashier's window by means of a crook-handle cane.

Merriam, aided by his pretty wife, fought the Canadian extradition case successfully. Federal Commissioner Hayes of this city had ordered him held for extradition, a writ of habeas corpus was filed in his behalf and is still pending. Today orders came from the State Department to discharge the man who is technically charged with being a fugitive from justice.

This order was based on the point that the chief Montreal evidence against Merriam was the identification of a photograph of Merriam as the likeness of the man who bought the tray of diamonds. This identification was made by a woman who happened to be a customer in the jewelry store when the theft occurred. The woman's evidence was given here by deposition, as she would not cross the border and come to Boston to testify in person. The State Department ruled that evidence of this nature in an extradition proceeding should be personal.

Mrs Merriam was on hand to greet her husband when he was freed from the extradition tangle but the triumph of the couple was short-lived for the re-arrest of Merriam followed quickly.

CAPTAIN ASTOR TO WED BRITISH NOBLEWOMAN

By International News Service.

London, June 19.—Captain, the Hon. John Jacob Astor, young son of William Waldorf Astor, now Lord Astor, is soon to wed Lady Mercer Nairne, it is announced.

Young Astor, who is an officer in the Life Guards and champion racquet player of the British army, was appointed by the King as a lieutenant in the Life Guards in 1906. Early in the war he was wounded in a battle in France, but the nature of his wounds were never disclosed.

Lady Mercer Nairne is the widow of Lord Charles George Francis Mercer Nairne, who was killed in the fighting in France, in October, 1914. He was a major in the First Dragoons. His widow was Lady Violet Mary Elliot, daughter of the fourth Earl of Minto, former Viceroy of India. She spent much of her time in the United States when her father was Governor-General of Canada.

Lord Mercer Nairne was formerly known as Lord Charles George Fitzmaurice, and was the second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne. He assumed the name of Mercer and Nairne in 1914 by royal license.

Their marriage, in Calcutta, on January 20, 1909, was made, by request of King Edward, a ceremony of unusual splendor to divert the minds of the native population from unrest. Every Indian potentate was invited by Lord Minto to the ceremonies and the festivities which followed.

John Jacob Astor, Jr., is a nephew by marriage of Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, who is to be married today in Bar Harbor to William K. Dick. He went through Eton and entered the English army in 1906. He gained fame in the army in 1908, when he won the racquet championship.

He was appointed in 1913 aide-de-camp to Lord Hardinge, viceroy of India until last April. His regiment was among the earliest sent with the British forces to France.

He holds title to $8,500,000 worth of New York real estate, including the site of the old Astor House, the Exchange Court building and the office building at Nos. 8-12 Wall street. His father transferred it to him last July to escape inheritance taxes. He is heir, of course, to other vast properties upon his father's death.

The gazetting of young Astor in the Life Guards by King Edward was the first indication that his father, William Waldorf Astor, was acquiring the royal favor he had long sought.

Astor Wedding Halted; Town Clerk Refuses to Budge on Five-Day Law

Widow of John Jacob Astor and her fiancee, who is on the left. Talking to Mrs. Astor is W. Rhinelander Stewart, Jr.

Bar Harbor, June 19.—The wedding invitations sent out by Mrs. Madeline Force Astor for the marriage which she had planned for today with her fiancee, William Karl Dick, were called in by long distance phone and by messenger.

The plans to keep the wedding quiet were so successful that even the town clerk was not informed in time to issue a license for the ceremony under the five-day limit set by Maine laws.

Accordingly the marriage is postponed, at least until some way has been discovered to hasten the slow-grinding legal machinery of Maine.

ALMOST IN TEARS.

Mrs. Astor herself telephoned out the cancellations of the invitations. She told her friends that she and Mr. Dick might wait until Thursday when a license can legally be issued for the marriage.

"Or perhaps," she added: "I shall meet Mr. Dick in New York and be married there." The beautiful young widow was almost in tears when W. G. Sherman, town clerk, motored up to her home. A license application had been filed in her behalf on Saturday by Victor Cushman, a young Newport and Washington society man.

The town clerk explained that under the law of April, 1915, five days must elapse after the filing of an application before non-residents can be united in marriage.

Then Sherman explained Mrs. Astor. "My New York attorneys told me I could come to Maine and be married the same day. They read the Maine statute to me, but it must have been before the 1915 act was passed.

TOWN CLERK OBDURATE.

"Isn't there any way we can secure a special permit or something?" she continued in high excitement.

"I do not think there is," responded Mr. Sherman. "As town clerk, I cannot break the law."

"Isn't that the most provoking thing you ever heard of?" remarked Mrs. Astor. "Why, I had everything planned for the wedding. I think I will go to New York this afternoon and be married there."

The young woman consulted with her mother, Mrs. William H. Force, and her sister Katherine, who arrived yesterday. They called New York on the telephone and consulted with members of the Force and Dick families and others. Then she called Mr. Sherman again. He again assured her there was no possible way of getting around the law. Asked by Mr. Sherman if she had definitely decided to be married on Thursday, Mrs. Astor said, "Yes, I suppose so, unless I find the law is simpler in Massachusetts or some other nearby State."

A number of wedding guests, including William H. Force and the Dick family party were due today. Whether they will arrive on schedule time in view of the probable postponement of the wedding could not be learned.

MINISTER CONFUSED, TOO.

The old Tudor house on the hill had been elaborately decorated with flowers from the Astor and George Vanderbilt greenhouses, a wedding supper had been ordered, and everything was in readiness for the wedding.

The minister who was to perform the ceremony tonight was as much up in the air on the wedding plans as any one.

"Mrs. Astor," he said, "has asked me to say nothing."

Neither Mrs. Astor nor her mother or sister would see newspaper men today.

A friend said tonight she had really hoped to be married before any announcement of her intentions reached the public. This friend said:

It was a score of gratification to her that her engagement of several months had been kept a close secret. She is so deeply and sincerely in love with Mr. Dick that she wanted to keep her love to herself.

Mrs. Astor does not consider that she is making any sacrifice whatever in marrying Mr. Dick. She cares nothing for the huge fortune that she will lose because of her re-marriage, and I know she has scorned the suggestion that a court contest might result in her retention of control of some of the Astor millions.

HUGHES IN NEW YORK TO PICK MANAGER

By International News Service.

New York, June 19.—Charles Evans Hughes arrived here from Washington early this morning for a busy day of political conferences before leaving for Providence to attend the graduation exercises at Brown University, his alma mater.

The chief business before him was the selection of a campaign manager. This was to be done at a meeting this afternoon between Hughes and the Republican sub-committee on organization, headed by W. Murray Crane, at the Astor Hotel. Mr. Hughes has made a selection, it is understood, from a list of candidates, including Frank Hitchcock, who managed his campaign in Chicago, and William R. Wilcox, president of the New York city Board of Education.

He will ask the sub-committee to ratify his choice. Mr. Hughes was accompanied to New York only by his secretaries. Mrs. Hughes, who had planned to accompany him, decided to remain behind. Mr. Hughes will go from Providence to Tiverton, where he will attend his class reunion at the home of Benjamin Barker.

He expects to return to New York on Tuesday to resume campaign planning. His Summer headquarters will be located temporarily at Bridgehampton, L. I., about ninety miles from New York.

Stamps and money, reported to be valued at $1,000, were taken. Postmaster Fred B. Crofutt said today that he could not state the exact amount taken until an account of stock was completed. James E. Cuff, recently appointed postmaster, takes charge of the local office today.

SCOUTS AT SLAIN BOY'S FUNERAL; CLERK HELD

Troop-mates from Troop 2, Boy Scouts, and classmates from the graduating class of the Agassiz School attended the funeral at 1 o'clock of fourteen-year-old Kenneth T. Myers, who was fatally shot at the periodical store of Bamford Tuill at No. 95 Bayleton street, Jamaica Plain, Friday evening.

A few hours before the funeral George Hickox, clerk in the Tuill store, was held in West Roxbury court in renewed bail of $2,000 for a continued hearing Friday on a charge of manslaughter in causing the boy's death.

This was the shooting case which remained a mystery until cleared up by autopsy and the admission of Hickox and Patrolman Frederick A. Pulsifer that the boy was struck by a bullet from Pulsifer's revolver which was being examined by Hickox. Captain Joseph Harriman of Jamaica Plain police station said that Hickox claimed that, when he snapped the trigger of the patrolman's loaded weapon, he had in mind his own unloaded revolver which he had been showing Pulsifer in an effort to sell it to him.

The mystery was raised by failure of Pulsifer and Hickox to report the shooting. The boy was said to have died of heart failure. It was not until an autopsy showed the wound that the story came out and Hickox was arrested.

Hickox was arraigned in West Roxbury Court. No plea was made. The continuance was secured by his counsel, Frank B. Deland.

The funeral at 1 o'clock was at No. 8 Enfield street, Jamaica Plain, the home of the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac P. Myers. The father is a patrolman attached to Jamaica Plain police station, the same as Pulsifer, whose weapon sent the fatal bullet.

Kenneth was an only son. His mother, prostrated by his death, is under a doctor's care.

The police sent flowers. Neighborhood children attended the funeral, in addition to Boy Scouts and Agassiz school children.

The service was conducted by Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins of the Central Congregational Church, which the boy attended.

BOSTON GIRL WAS VICTIM OF SURGERY

Marion McCann, the eighteen-year-old Boston girl who died in a police ambulance on the day from Nahant to Lynn yesterday, was a victim of illegal surgery, according to Medical Examiner Pinkham, who performed an autopsy at Lynn today.

The information was turned over to the police.

The girl had been living at Nahant for the past two weeks.

MISS BERNICE BROWN, class lawyer, who made the will of the Radcliffe 1916 girls.

Radcliffe seniors held their class exercises today. Doris Holmes, the class historian, called the graduates the "army of 1916" scaling the wall of knowledge, and she hit at the Junior Prom as being aimed at a "certain strategic conquest of men."

Eleanor Stevens delivered the class gifts and Bernice Brown was the class lawyer. The class poem was read by Adelaide Nichols.

Tonight the class holds its supper. The chairman of the committee is Marion Wilson, who will be assisted by Margaret Woodward and Gladys Hopkins. A toast to the college will be given by Adelaide Nichols; to the gymnasium, by Helen Beveridge; to the hours and distinction, by Dorothy Conolly, and to the "would-be if they could's," by Madeline Brewer.

Aviator Swoops Down and Talks with Children

An aviator swooped down over the heads of a number of school children in Peabody square, Dorchester, today, and when less than fifty feet from the ground the aviator in the machine leaned over and yelled:

"Well, kiddies, howdy? Going to school? Well, I'll be going——"

And then the airman soared away.

One of the children to tell of the incident was Alfred Powers of Ashment, according to the police.

ELOPERS ARE FORGIVEN IN COURTROOM

Chris Geraife and Mrs. Catharine Viola, who eloped from Brooklyn six weeks ago, were forgiven and taken back by their respective life-partners in East Boston Court today.

Kindly suggestions from Judge Barnes and the sight of their children aided the wronged wife and husband toward forgiving the erring ones and softened the shame and sorrow of the culprits.

The elopers, who were arrested Saturday, were charged in court with a serious offence. They pleaded guilty and were given each a three months' suspended sentence in the House of Correction. When the family circumstances was straightened out all left the court together.

The elopement and the subsequent developments made a remarkable chain. Geraife is thirty years old. His wife, Mrs. Concetta Geraife, has borne him two children, one a nursing infant.

Mrs. Viola is the wife of Tony Viola and the mother of three children. The Violas and the Geraifes were acquainted in Brooklyn.

Utterly unsuspected by Tony Viola and Mrs. Geraife the attachment developed between Geraife and Mrs. Viola. Six weeks ago they fled to East Boston. But Mrs. Viola would not leave her children. She took the three little ones with her. Geraife hired a flat for himself and them at No. 6 Paris street, East Boston.

LOST ENGAGEMENT RING IS FOUND

Miss L. Lindgren of Somerville is once more the happiest girl in the world, for she has recovered her beautiful diamond engagement ring, which was lost last week.

By a coincidence it was found by a young man who had himself recently made another young woman the happiest girl in the world by giving her the same kind of a ring.

This young man, who does not wish his name published, read the want ads in the AMERICAN, together with the news story that was written on the loss of the ring. As a result he came to the AMERICAN office, where Miss Lindgren is employed as a stenographer, and returned the circlet which he had found on Washington street.

The Growing Tendency of the Age---

A noted English scientist asserts the tendency is toward "neurasthenia, 'nerves,' etc." A remarkable statement!

No less remarkable is the cause which, he adds, "is not unlikely due to removing from our diet those elements of cereal food which Nature has hid in the husk of the grain, and which man in his ignorance discards.

The elements to which he refers are the well-known mineral salts of phosphorus, lime, iron, etc., removed in milling flour to make it white, but which physicians know are indispensable to normal, well-balanced nerves, bodies and brains.

Surprising what a transformation may be made with a new piece of Summer furniture here and there, a touch of bright cretonnes or other Draperies, and the amazingly decorative, cool-looking piazza rugs.

The expense need not be large,—more a matter of taste and judgment in making selections.

Take the wicker furniture illustrated, for example—Large arm chair, with magazine pocket, in antique green enamel, $19.50; desk, $24; chair $10.50; cushions extra. This distinguished suite also includes rockers, side chairs, settee, table and fern stand.

But these examples are small and meagre when compared with Paine's wonderful exhibition of everything for the Summer Home.

No Local Game Today
Sox Homeward Bound

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

This is an off day in Boston baseball circles. The Braves closed their home stay Saturday, being unable to play either the morning or afternoon game on account of the heavy rain.

They stopped off at Newport on their way to New York to play an exhibition game, opening with the Giants today in a doubleheader at the Polo Grounds.

The Cubs, Cincinnati Champions are on their way home today from Chicago where they closed their first western trip of the season, and weather permitting will open their brief home stay with the Yankees tomorrow afternoon.

Manager Carrigan's men have not had a very remarkable western trip, but return in almost the same position, which is about all that could be expected of them owing to the injuries sustained and the men absent from the lineup due to illness.

Wild Bill Donovan's Yankees are the first attraction with the Red Sox. They occupy the position just ahead of the Champions in the standing and have been playing consistent baseball, so the games between these clubs should be hard fought.

Bill Carrigan can climb up by winning and the New Yorkers must win in order to hold their present place. With anything like favorable weather conditions the baseball followers of Boston may look forward to some baseball worth while.

The Tygers have made quite an advance during the past two weeks. Manager Hughie Jennings' men appear to be acting at their true form for the grind which will tell the story. The Champions still have this scrappy team to beat if they are to repeat for the flag.

GRIFF'S HOLDING ON.

Washington is holding its ground fairly well, while the Cleveland club continues to retain the league leadership with a margin sufficient for a while at least. This club has been the big surprise of baseball, but the next invasion of the East by the western clubs should find the eastern teams much stronger than upon the first visit.

Indications point to some seasonable weather also, which will be a great thing for the game, which has suffered materially from cold and wet weather in the East.

When the Athletics come here there will be a day known as Witt Day, falling next Friday, while a return of Wheeler fans will be at Fenway Park that day to cheer their young fellow-townsman, who is playing shortstop and leading off for the Connie Macks. For some time Lapolette has been at work and a substantial amount has been subscribed for a present to be given Witt. This will be a diamond ring.

BRAVES ON SHORT TRIP.

The Braves open their series with New York on Friday, quite a trick, like the Champions, will soon meet the Giants in order to climb. The series in New York will be followed with much interest here in Boston. The short trip ends with a series played with the National League Champions.

The western clubs in the parent league are more in the second division, with Chicago being the most likely club to break into the Big Four. The race is close enough to satisfy anyone and for some weeks to come the changes are likely to be frequent.

The Braves carried away with them a fine pitching staff, one that should be able to hold their place, but the team lack of these men has not hit the ball. This was responsible for many of their losses. If they can get together in their hitting the team should show a good account of itself upon this trip.

Kramer Noses Out Alf Grenda by Few Inches

Newark, N. J., June 19.—Frank Kramer of East Orange, N. J., won the half-mile national bicycle championship race at the Newark Velodrome yesterday.

It was Kramer's third victory in championship races this season, and he now has a total of fifteen points to his credit for the national title, which he has won fifteen years in succession.

Kramer won the race by inches, nipping Alfred Grenda, the tall Tasmanian, at the tape. There were some who thought Grenda had won, and losses greeted the announcement of Kramer's victory. In the grand semi-final Kramer defeated Alf Goullet, his closest rival last season.

In the heat to decide the second and third place, Marcel Dupuy, the French rider, created a surprise by beating out Goullet.

Frank Kavanagh proved to be too strong for Joe Spencer, the Toronto boy, in the Brassard Race, and won by half a length. Jake Magin just beat out Willie Hanley in the miss-and-out for the professionals. Magin was a length to the good at the finish.

Ray Eaton, who had a handicap of 120 yards, on the one-mile Republic Handicap for pros.

RESTA PROVES HIS RIGHT TO CROWN

Chicago, June 19.—All doubt as to Dario Resta's right to be called the American Speed King was dispelled today. After winning the 500-mile races at Indianapolis and Chicago this year the daring Italian engaged in a private duel with his fellow countryman, Ralph De Palma, and won easily. Three races were held—10, 24 and 50 miles. Resta's Peugeot scored home winner in all. In the first he averaged 94 miles an hour, in the second 105, and in the third 103. Thirty thousand persons saw the races.

ALL-STAR SOCCER TEAM GOING ABROAD

At a meeting of the international games committee of the United States Football Association, called to select the team to represent America in the international soccer games in Norway and Sweden, it was decided to circularize all affiliated associations and ask them to submit the names of their best players by June 22.

The selection of fifteen players will be made on June 24. The team, which will sail on July 26, will be in charge of Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the United States Football Association.

THOUSAND WOMEN SEE DILON BOX

New York, June 19.—A crowd of 5,000 Sunday sightseers watched Jack Dillon at Washington Park, Brooklyn, today as he did his training for his bout with Frank Moran on June 29. There were nearly a thousand women in the grand stand and on the lawn close up to the ring where Dillon worked.

Dillon punched the bag, skipped the rope, worked at the pulleys and finished up with several rounds of boxing with his sparring partners. Dillon after his workout declared that he never felt better in his life.

KOLEHMAINEN GETS EVEN WITH KYRONEN

New York, June 19.—Hannes Kolehmainen, who represents the Irish American A. C. in open competition, carried the colors of the Kalevas A. C. to victory in the one mile run at the Scottish American Athletic League track and field championships held at Lamer Park, Bensonhurst.

The Finn avenged on an old account in this event by beating Willie Kyronen, who beat him about a month ago in the Bronx to City Hall marathon route.

SALLEE IS SOUGHT BY HON. PAT MORAN

New York, June 19.—Report has it strong that President Baker of the Philadelphia (National) League club has asked Owner Britton of the Cardinals to put a price on Southpaw Sallee's left leg. Sallee stands suspended and declares he will quit the game if he is not dressed of. Baker was in Britton's commodity box Saturday night, but neither magnate would discuss the report that their controversy had to do with the price. Sallee's transfer of the attenuated left-hander.

Braves Open in N. Y.
Twin Bill on Program

New York, June 19.—George T. Stallings, known sometimes as Master of The Meadows and yet at others as the Miracle Man, led into our fair city this morning the Braves, an ambitious bunch of ball players, who have designs on the National League gonfalon. The four-days stand opens with a double-header today.

Having grabbed a game of ball from an independent team in Newport, R. I., yesterday, with "Big Bill" James working during a greater portion of the test, Stallings had more than one reason to be pleased.

Not that he is a Brave-hater and that second to none in wishing success to any one of the other clubs, James went seven innings yesterday and in that Fare Evens game last week, but only because of his inability to properly handle the ball. Rather, Stallings realized that he'd got about all he had coming.

In all the Newporters gath red seven safe blows off the slenis of James. One of these was a four-ply smash and another was good for three cushions.

But James Bill went along in mighty handy fashion. True-it is, he didn't face the sort of opposition he will face later on, but, for all that, he worked well enough to satisfy his boss that he is at last rounding into form.

A TWIN BILL TODAY.

Today the Braves tackle the Giants right after settling it would appear as though Stallings' two slab choices would rest on Don Carlos Patrick Hagerty and George Tyler.

Thus far this season the Braves and Giants have split mighty close to even, the count being 5-4 in favor of the sixtners. New York hasn't been going any too well o'er its return home and on that account Stallings feels certain of the win.

STALLINGS IS GLEEFUL.

Yesterday," remarked the Chief, "we trimmed a team in Newport to the tune of 11-5. Today we tackle the Giants, and while I hadn't expect a win by any such figures as 11-5, nevertheless, I feel sure one game, if not two, will come our way. My team is getting the best pitching in the league today and I am confident our streak of weak hitting is over."

Rudolph was at the Breslin this forenoon ready and willing to take his turn on the mound. It appears, however, as if Stallings intended to give Dick a trifle more rest. His right hand is still sore as a result of the liner he stopped from the bat of Tom Clarke in the Cincinnati series. However, it's a cinch Rudolph gets into the fray before the Braves leave here for Philadelphia.

THOUSAND WOMEN SEE DILON BOX

New York, June 19.—A crowd of 5,000 Sunday sightseers watched Jack Dillon at Washington Park, Brooklyn, today as he did his training for his bout with Frank Moran on June 29. There were nearly a thousand women in the grand stand and on the lawn close up to the ring where Dillon worked.

Dillon punched the bag, skipped the rope, worked at the pulleys and finished up with several rounds of boxing with his sparring partners. Dillon after his workout declared that he never felt better in his life.

KOLEHMAINEN GETS EVEN WITH KYRONEN

New York, June 19.—Hannes Kolehmainen, who represents the Irish American A. C. in open competition, carried the colors of the Kalevas A. C. to victory in the one mile run at the Scottish American Athletic League track and field championships held at Lamer Park, Bensonhurst.

The Finn avenged on an old account in this event by beating Willie Kyronen, who beat him about a month ago in the Bronx to City Hall marathon route.

SALLEE IS SOUGHT BY HON. PAT MORAN

New York, June 19.—Report has it strong that President Baker of the Philadelphia (National) League club has asked Owner Britton of the Cardinals to put a price on Southpaw Sallee's left leg. Sallee stands suspended and declares he will quit the game if he is not dressed of. Baker was in Britton's commodity box Saturday night, but neither magnate would discuss the report that their controversy had to do with the price. Sallee's transfer of the attenuated left-hander.

BIG TRAIN STARTS TRIPLE PLAY GOING

Newport, R. I., June 19.—En route to New York the Braves stopped off here and played before a good-sized Sunday crowd, Newport's pretentious semi-pro, playing host to the tribune Trojans, 11-5. Bill James pitched seven innings and was pushed for seven hits. Kousell started a sensational triple play among whose pegs, with two singles and a double, did the best hitting.

DAVIS WILL PLAY BIDDLE

Philadelphia, June 19.—Willy E. Davis, the California star, will meet Craig Biddle, Newport, in the final round of the Pennsylvania State tennis tournament today.

Harvard Nine Departs Off for No. 1 with Elis

A squad of twenty-five Harvard tossers, under command of Coach Fred Mitchell, left on an early morning train for New Haven, so as to get in an afternoon's workout on the Elis' diamond, as well as a good night's sleep in the Connecticut town, in advance of tomorrow's game, the first of the series between the two crack nines.

Eddie Mahan is carded to oppose Yale. The Natick pride thrives on hostile, ditto large crowds, as his record, both on the diamond and gridiron shows. He is cool and calculating and generally ranks has best ball on foreign diamonds.

Garfield will probably do the heavy work for Yale. This young man, although inexperienced, has shown the best of the Elis' flingers this year. He pitched the 1-0 game Yale lost to Princeton last week.

Larry Walsh, or Watrous, a left-hander, will get into action for the Elis on Soldiers Field, Wednesday, in the second game of the series, with Wilmor Whitney on the mound for Harvard.

Coach Mitchell will probably start Reed at short field in preference to Bothfeld, as the former has scattered one series against the Elis with honors.

Munson, Yale's third baseman, has been behind the bat since the nine's regular catcher, Mudget, turned his ankle.

The umpires for the series are to be Conway and Westcott. Westcott has officiated already in the Harvard-Princeton and Yale-Princeton series, while Conway worked on the bases in the recent Harvard-Tufts game. The probable lineups tomorrow:

EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS Cork Tips Plain Ends CIGARETTES

Alfred W. McCann writes able articles in the New York Globe, exposing filth in foods and factories. He calls a spade a spade.

He examined the plant where STRAIGHTS are made and these are a few of the spades he called:

"Cigarette maker puts food makers to shame"

"I urge all to visit this factory where cleanliness is little short of godliness"

"The Tobacco was laid away as carefully as the old fashioned house-wife stores away her spare linen"

"A poem of sanitation"

STRAIGHTS are surpassingly good and pure. One box tells the story.

Ethics Govern Football New Beginners' Code

A code of ethics to govern the game of football beyond the point where the rules now stop has been announced by E. K. Hall of Dartmouth, chairman of the Football Rules Committee. It is the first such formulation of principles to be drawn up for any sport in this country, according to those who planned it.

The rules committee, which has already revised slightly the playing rules for next season, is to publish the code as a supplement to the rules for the guidance of the collegiate and scholastic players who almost invariably follow the collegiate standards.

Summarizing the code, the committee says:

"You may meet players and even coaches who will tell you that it is all right to violate the rules if you do not get caught. This is the code that obtains among sneak thieves and pickpockets. The crime in their code is in getting caught.

"The football code is different. The player who intentionally violates a rule is guilty of unfair play and unsportsmanlike tactics, and whether or not he escapes being penalized he brings discredit to the good name of the game."

For the benefit of those who are just beginning to learn the game, the rules committee has decided to publish in the official book of rules the following suggestions.

HOLDING.

Holding is prohibited by the rules because it does not belong in the game of football. It is unfair play. It eliminates skill. The slowest man in the world could make a forty-yard run in every play if the rest of his teammates would hold their opponents long enough. The game is to advance the ball by strategy, skill and speed without holding your opponent.

If your coach cannot show you how to gain distance without holding your opponents get another coach. It is fair to assume that he does not understand the strategy of the game.

SIDELINE COACHING.

Coaching from the sidelines is prohibited in the rules because it is considered an unfair practice. The game is to be played by the players using their own muscle and their own brains. If an onlooker, having seen all the hands in a game of cards, undertook to tell one of the players what card to play, the other players would have cause to object.

"BEATING THE BALL."

"Beating the ball" by an unfair use of a starting signal is nothing less than deliberately stealing an advantage from the other side. An honest starting signal is good football, but a starting signal which has for its purpose starting the team a fraction of a second before the ball is put in play in the hope that it will not be detected by the officials, is nothing short of crookedness. It is the same as if a sprinter in a hundred-yard dash had a secret arrangement with the starter to give him a tenth of a second's warning before he blew the whistle.

TALKING TO OPPONENTS.

Talking to your opponents, if it falls short of being abusive or insulting, is not prohibited by the rules, partly because it ought not to be necessary, and partly because no rules can make a gentleman out of a mucker. No good sportsman is ever guilty of clean talk to his opponents.

TALKING TO OFFICIALS.

When an official imposes a penalty or makes a decision he is simply doing his duty as he sees it. He is on the field representing the integrity of the game of football, and his decision, even though he may have made a mistake in judgment, is final and conclusive, and should be so accepted. Even if you think the decision is a mistaken one, take your medicine and do not whine about it. If there is anything to be said, let your captain do the talking. That's his business. Yours is to keep quiet and play the game.

Syracuse, Penn, Columbia Name Their '17 Pilots

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 19.—R. R. O'Loughlin, '18, who rowed at No. 3 in Saturday's race, has been elected captain of next year's Columbia crew.

A. J. Osman, '17, who was at No. 4 in the Syracuse boat, will direct the destinies of that crew in 1917.

A. Wall, '17, who was at No. 3 in Pennsylvania's junior varsity eight, will command next year's boat.

MOGRIDGE ALMOST READY

Cleveland, June 19.—Pitcher George Mogridge reported to Manager Donovan, after spending a few days with Bonesetter Reese at Youngstown before the Yankees left for the East. Reese ordered a week's rest and said that the "pull" he gave the member Friday would then have it all right.

Yale Oarsman Injured Atkins Is Lost to Blue

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 19.—The calm before the storm settled down on the Yale and Harvard rowing camps today. All the crews entered upon the period of four days, which is devoted to merely conditioning rowing before their annual regatta, and Coaches Nickalls and Herrick gave orders for light morning and evening practice at a low stroke.

In neither camp is there talk of another change in any crew and none will be made unless in case of sudden illness or injury.

Already "bench footing" has cost Yale a valuable oarsman and the coaches in both camps have warned their charges against a repetition.

Atkins of the Yale second shell was wrestling with a fellow oarsman and fell heavily, tearing a ligament in his chest. He was compelled to abandon his training and has left the rowing camp. His place has been filled by A. M. Munson.

A pork piece of roast beef, it will be remembered, threw the entire Yale squad out of training last year and jeopardized their chances of victory, although the Blue finally swept the river clean on race day. Some of the Yale alumni have urged Coach Nickalls the past few weeks to feed his backward oarsmen on some more of that "tainted" roast beef which seemed to produced such good results on race day.

Today the general health of every oarsman in the two ramps is excellent. H. S. Middendorf of the Harvard squad has apparently entirely recovered from the attack of la grippe, which took him out of the varsity eight last week. He has gone into the second shell and would have been given his seat in the first boat if the coaches did not fear that he might falter in the fourth mile of the gruelling race Friday.

H. Middendorf has never rowed in a four-mile race, although he was a member of the Harvard eight a week ago when it travelled the four-mile course in practice in 19 minutes, 42 seconds, the fastest a Harvard crew has ever rowed it on the Thames.

A Yale-Harvard conference will be held immediately with Valentine Chappell of New London, chairman of the regatta committee, to establish the finish mark of the four-mile race, just at the drawbridge in New London.

The mark has been moved by someone about 150 feet from the spot where it was located last year

Mid-Week Card at Beach Oval a Spicy One

Owing to the large number of postponements, Nat Butler of the Revere cycle track has found it necessary to double up many of his events in order to keep up with the season's schedule.

Consequently, on Wednesday night he will offer just about the most attractive bill ever put on at the oval. There will be two-motor-paced races, the Brassard, a one-hour contest and a twenty-five-mile event.

The Brassard, which gives the winner a premium of $5 a day, as well as the championship shield, until he is beaten in another contest under similar conditions, will bring together George Wiley, Victor Linari, Clarence Carman and George Seves, four of the fleetest middle-distance riders in the game.

In the twenty-five-mile race Paul Suter and Georges Colombatto, two foreign stars new to the Revere fans, will meet "Pinkie" Turville, the track's own favorite too.

This card is but a forerunner to the many big things Manager Butler has planned for the near future. Several big match races are in sight, with Linari, Wiley and Didier playing the leading parts. Linari charges teamwork between Wiley and Didier and is anxious to meet both of them, but in separate contests.

$35, $40, $45, $50 SUITINGS

I buy out the entire stock of Geo. W. Brown, woolens, Skinner's silk and satin, Belgian canvas, fine linings, etc., who has been located for the last thirty years in the Studio Building, 110 Tremont St., Boston. This stock of woolens comprises as choice a line of goods, with as great a variety, as any tailor in Boston could boast of. Mr. Brown was a keen business man, and, if his woolens are any criterion, a man of great cloth intelligence.

The great bulk of this stock was purchased through the commission house of William B. Leonard, whose cloths can be found in no tailor's shop who sells goods under $35 for a suit, and I offer you a range of worsteds with the original William B. Leonard tickets on them, at a price,

Three-Piece Suit To Order $15.50

These cloths were never put in a suit by Mr. Brown to sell under $35.00 and from that up to $50.00. I offer you the original tickets of Macullar Parker Co., Boston's greatest wholesale woolen concern; the original tickets of Lippincott, Johnson & Co., Milbank, Leaman & Co., Fifth Avenue's large commission house; Wain, Shiell & Son, a fine London concern, and other houses of similar character.

This stock is mostly confined styles, nearly all London Shrunk, and of a quality that no man can question for color. It comprises a variety of merchandise that is never used in suits to sell under $35-$40-$45-$50, and I today advertise them and advise my old customers to get in early on the purchase so they can pick out as many styles as they choose.

Three-Piece Suit To Order $15.50

From what information I can gather, Mr. Brown did not intend to retire at this season, and I am given to understand that most of the heavyweights in this range are next Fall's goods. There are no crazy patterns, everything clean staple effects, Blue Cheviots, Blue Serges, Gray Unfinished Worsteds, quiet Shankskin weaves, Tartan Plaids, Tartan Checks, and a general variety of everything that would constitute a merchant tailor's stock.

If you were a tailor it would be hardly possible for you to get the suit pattern for the price I am charging for a suit made to fit or new suit made. I will line these goods with a fine alpaca lining. They will be cut under the eye of the highest salaried designer of custom clothing in the country today, made by union help, under union conditions, in sanitary shops.

Very Backward

The Neversleeps had just moved into the flat below that of the great Professor Fuddlehead, M. A., and, aided by a few congenial spirits, were having a "quiet little housewarming."

The walls groaned, the windows shook, plates crashed into a thousand pieces, the Neversleeps' baby squalled unheard, and with it all the notes of "Alexander's Rag-Time Band" floated up to the professor, poring over "Muddle's Bosheology."

In desperation he at last sent Matilda Jane to remonstrate with the new-comers.

"Please, sir," she said to Mr. Neversleep, "Professor Fuddlehead says, Will you make less noise, because he can't read."

"Ah," replied the noisy one, "I'm sorry to hear that. Tell your master that I could read when I was only five."

The Struggles of a Wife

Dayton Tells Myra of His Love for Grace

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Copyright, 1916, Star Company

The veranda was almost deserted when Myra Webb stepped out into the fragrant darkness to wait for her daughter. The air was cool and sweet, for the rain of the afternoon had brought out the odors of the flowers and freshened the whole world.

Any one watching this matron as she walked up and down the long veranda would have thought her a calm, self-contained woman. Yet her mind was in a turmoil.

It was evident that something important had happened between young Dayton and Grace. Myra knew what it was to love, and she knew also that no other emotion could have brought that light to her daughter's eyes, that softness to her tone.

She remembered with a swift mother-pang that this new gentleness was caused by another person than the mother who had devoted her life to her child. Then she stifled the selfish thought with the grateful reminder that this was what she had longed for for Grace; that now her child would be safe.

A step behind her caused her to turn suddenly. Henry Dayton had come out upon the veranda and was close by her. He held out his hands to her.

"May I have a few minutes with you?" he asked in his direct fashion.

"We are all alone here, and there is no better time than this for me to tell you that I love your daughter and that I have asked her to marry me."

A quarter of an hour had elapsed before Grace, looking out of the front door, saw her mother and Dayton walking arm in arm and talking confidentially. They came quickly forward at sight of her.

"We will go right in to dinner, little girl," Myra said.

Some of the guests were in the hall and there was no opportunity for a private word with her child. Mr. Dayton," she added, "as you have not had your dinner, why not come to our table and eat with us this evening?"

MYRA CONGRATULATES

"Oh, no," Grace protested hurriedly. "There comes Miss Ainslie —and I don't want her to see us together. Come on, mother."

A moment later Myra Webb found that her daughter was conducting her to her place in the dining-room.

The pair talked in generalities until dinner was over. Then, as by common consent, they went upstairs—ostensibly to get their wraps —for the evening was cool.

Alone in her room, Myra held out her arms to her daughter.

"Darling," she said, "I am very happy for you!"

For a moment did Grace Webb cling to her mother as if she were a child again. Then she straightened herself up with a little laugh.

"I declare," she said, "your cheeks are wet, mother. You are crying! I did not mean to make you do that!"

"It's only because I am happy, dear," Myra tried to explain.

Grace laughed again, but tremulously.

"I know," she said with an effort to speak lightly, "that you have a habit of crying when you are happy. I remember that's what you did over an unexpectedly high price for one of your first stories. Perhaps I'm made differently—but just now I don't feel as if I could ever cry again."

"Yes, you are different," Myra said gently, as if apologizing for her own weakness. She would not allow herself to be hurt by her daughter's self-repression.

Grace was like Horace. Nobody but his wife had ever seen his most tender side, and then only in supreme moments. To probably nobody but Henry Dayton would see the tender side of Grace's character. Yet how she, the mother, longed for a few moments of it all for herself!

Dayton had told Myra he must go back to town day after tomorrow. He would call at once on Grace's father. Myra herself would write to Horace tonight and tell him of Grace's happiness.

It was only right and fair that he should learn the news from her. She was sure that it would meet with his approval. Yet it would be hard for him to part with his beloved child.

A PROMISE TO KEEP

"But he will not have to part with me yet," Grace said when Myra suggested this. "I promised Miss Leiston to teach through the next term. I must keep my word. I have explained this to Henry."

How like Grace that was, and how much like her father also! The woman, listening to her, felt a throb of admiration for the conscientiousness that would not allow one—even in the first hours of a new happiness—to forget Duty.

Later she sent the girl downstairs, while she sat down and wrote to Horace.

Grace had promised Dayton that she would meet him at the shaded end of the veranda and tell him "Goodnight" there. He was waiting for her when she came out into the darkness. He pushed a chair forward for her and sank into another by her side.

"Dearest," he murmured remorsefully, "your mother told me that you were quite lame this afternoon, and you never said a word about it. I am so sorry my accident made you suffer."

"I am not sorry!" she exclaimed. "I hardly felt the pain until I had parted from you. It was a wonderful journey we took today."

"Not as wonderful as another I hope we may take next Spring, dear," he said.

"Can we take it in the same automobile?" she asked, smilingly.

"Indeed, we can, and will," he agreed. "And if it breaks down it won't make much difference, really, for we have proved this afternoon how well we can walk over the roughest roads together."

The Manicure Lady

She Talks on Culture and Club Life for the Benefit of the Head Barber.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"Sister Mayme has joined a Culture Club," said the Manicure Lady. "She is going to be cultured if it takes all her spare time."

"I suppose it's just one of them fads," said the Head Barber. "My missus belongs to some of them clubs, and it don't seem to learn her nothing."

"I think this culture club is O.K.," said the Manicure Lady. "If I notice that Mayme is getting more cultured, maybe I'll join it too, though goodness knows, George, any culture I might grab o' to would be kind of like a lost child around this barber shop. Pink shirts to look at and Link weeklies to read ain't much for making culture."

"I don't believe much in culture, anyhow," declared the Head Barber. "I ain't got none, and I'm just as happy without it."

"Maybe your customers would be happier if you had a little," the Manicure Lady suggested. "They say culture is the greatest thing in the world. Brother Wilfred took some lessons in deportment once, and ever since then he has been able to get money from father by asking for it nice and polite.

"He wrote a poem on culture for Mayme to read at her club. It goes like this:

"The finest thing in all the world
Is having plenty of culture.
When people ain't got any of such
They act just like a vulture.

I always try to be polite
And considerate of people's feelings,
And that is why they treat me all right
When with them I have dealings."

"I don't know much about poetry," said the Head Barber, "but that don't sound like poetry to me. It sounds kind of foolish."

"That's on account of your not having no intellect, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Poetry is wrote for folks with tops on their bodies, people with brains. If everybody had brains the poets would get rich. As it is, they write for folks that knows good things, and I hope you don't think Wilfred would be hurt none if he knew you didn't like his poetry."

"You used to think I was smart," said the Head Barber. "Anybody you always asked my advice about a lot of things."

"You're smart in world things, George," agreed the Manicure Lady, "things like billiards and betting and baseball and beer, and everything that begins with th. But all them finer things of life, like poetry and pianos and pictures and pie, you don't care much about. Your folks couldn't have been very proud of you when you was young, George. You ain't got no refinement."

"Maybe you're right," said the subdued Head Barber, "but refinement ain't ever felt to home in a barber shop."

Anecdotes of the Famous

John D. Rockefeller tells about a quick-witted driver.

The driver's name was Timothy, and at the stables where he worked a prize was given every year to the man who could show the best groomed horses and the cleanest stables.

One year, during inspection time, Timothy made certain of winning the prize, as his horses and his stables were in the pink of perfection.

But as the inspector took one last look around, having fully decided to award the prizes to Timothy, his eye fell on a cobweb in a dim corner of one of the stalls.

Timothy noted the inspector's change of face, but he was a man of quick wit and resource, and he spoke up briskly.

"I keep that there web there, sir," he said, "to catch the flies. The way they torment the mare is something awful!"

Timothy won his prize.

Among the stories of Lord Strathcona told in the official biography by Beckles Wilson is one concerning an occasion when a stranger called at the High Commissioner's office in London saying his father drove Lord Strathcona to Aberdeen when he went to Canada. This gained an immediate interview, from which the visitor came away with a five-pound note. Three weeks later he returned, saw Lord Strathcona again, and got another five pounds. A third time the breakdown Aberdonian was announced:

"Oh, well," said Lord Strathcona, in his quiet way, "I cannot see him. Give him another five-pound note, and tell him he need not come again. You may add that his father did not drive me to Aberdeen, but I went to Canada. As a matter of fact, I walked."

Andrew Carnegie relates the following story: A tourist who was visiting a certain country town stopped in front of a handsome building and asked an old man who was leaning against the railing what it was.

"This is the public library, sir," he replied. "Erected by Mr. Carnegie, sir!" "Is it was who gave us this beautiful library, sir."

"I am glad to see you appreciate it," said the tourist, surprised at the old fellow's enthusiasm. "But you don't look like the man of literary tastes."

"Oh, no, sir!" said the other, puffing contently at his pipe. "I don't use the library, but my old woman has been appointed the cleaner!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ASK HIM TO DINE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, work for my father and have met a young man I admire very much. This young man has helped my father out of late business troubles. I don't like to make advances. He has been courteous to me, and in fact, has made me feel that he has a personal interest in me.

VERY ANXIOUS.

IT will be a good idea to have your father invite this young man to your home for dinner. This courtesy would be merely a token of appreciation of his kindness. Then it will be very easy for you to make him feel that he is a welcome caller.

BRIDAL ATTIRE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and expect to be married next month. I expect to wear a blue broadcloth suit trimmed with seal fur, a satin hat and white gloves. Would it be proper for me to carry a bouquet of flowers, and if so, what kind of flowers ought they to be? The wedding ceremony will take place early on Wednesday evening in church. My intended husband expects to wear a blue serge suit. Would it be proper for him to wear a white necktie or would a shade of blue be best? BRIDE-TO-BE.

I PREFER a little prayer book to flowers for the bride wears a suit. If you want flowers wear a corsage bouquet rather than carry a bouquet. Two or three orchids are pretty if the groom can afford them, but if not any good florist can make you a pretty corsage of tiny rosebuds or some other flowers which he will probably be glad to suggest. Don't have the groom wear a light tie with a blue serge suit; it would not look at all well.

TALK IT OVER WITH HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a girl three years my junior and I believe my love is returned. When I ask this girl to go out she always asks to have another man with me to accompany her friend. Now as none of my men friends cares for this second girl it is hard for me. ANXIOUS.

YOUR girl friend seems to have an exaggerated sense of loyalty to another girl. I suppose she has a generous nature and likes to share her pleasure with a less popular girl. But she is not quite fair to you in demanding that you always furnish an escort for her companion. I think you had better tell her frankly that it just happens that most of the boys you know are independent chaps who insist on choosing their own companions and that they are not willing to have you arrange parties of four all the time. Ask her to show you some of the generous loyalty she shows her girl friend. An honest little talk will probably straighten things out.

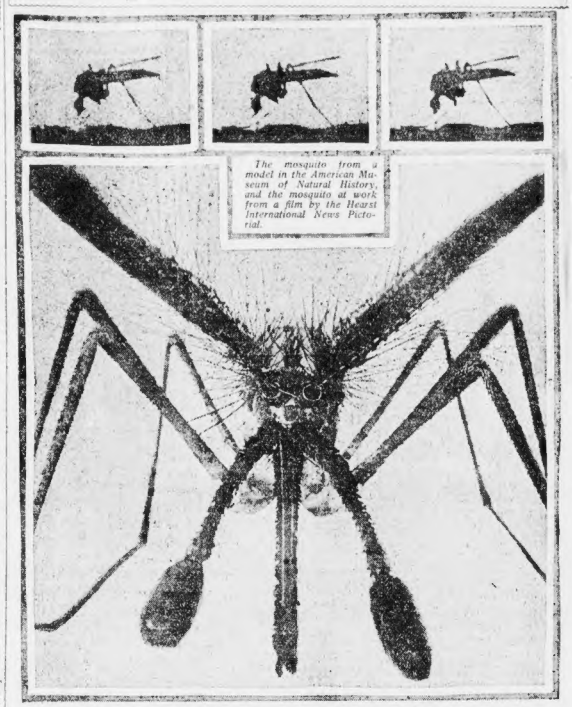
SANITOL WEEK JULY 9TH

Mosquitos as Man Chasers



The mosquito from a model in the American Museum of Natural History, and the mosquito at work from a film by the Hearst International News Pictorial.

Clouds of humming demons, armed with poisoned lances, chasing man, following him up, surrounding him where he settles as wolves besiege an encampment, attacking him in his homes, in his walks and his labors, breaking camp when he breaks, stopping where he stops, acquiring from him the habit of emigration, infesting his life with the germs of death and singing a high-keyed paean of victory and gratification over his poignant sufferings—such is the picture which the recent observation of Major Ashburn, the general inspector of the health department in the Panama Canal Zone, makes of the anopheles mosquito in its relations with its human contemporaries.

This, as Dr. C. S. Ludlow, of the Army Medical Museum, points out, is a new viewpoint of the mosquito, which may be of advantage in the war upon that dangerous and irritating insect. Hitherto it has been generally assumed that mosquitoes, like rattlesnakes, were not to be feared unless one went into a neighborhood where they already abounded.

It seems to be still true that the malarial varieties of mosquitoes have their natural habitats, from which they will not widely depart unless they are forced away. But they differ from rattlesnakes and other noxious creatures in that, instead of avoiding the neighborhood of man, they quickly learn to prefer it.

The taste of human blood becomes as fascinating for them as the smell and flavor of whiskey are for some unfortunate, weak-willed men. Dangerous snakes keep away from inhabited places, but mosquitoes seek them. Man draws them after him, and Major Ashburn puts it: "The malarial mosquito follows man."

Some very curious and suggestive observations have been made in the Canal Zone concerning the distances to which malarial mosquitoes will go in search of human blood, the manner in which they become infected with malarial germs and the screening effect produced by a settlement interposed between the lurking place of the mosquitoes and another settlement beyond it.

If they get all they want of their favorite food at the nearby point they will not go beyond it, but if the human screen is removed, then they will go farther, pitching their camp in a new locality. If necessary, for, upon the average, they do not take flights much exceeding a quarter of a mile from their breeding places, although instances have been known where, owing to special circumstances, they have extended their range to a mile.

Some experiments, or at least observations, have been made upon the effect of an "animal barrier" interposed between a human settlement and the home of the mosquito, but this has been found to be inefficient. The insects prefer human blood, and the easily perforated human skin.

It has also been observed that places in the Canal Zone where settlements of laborers had existed for a considerable time, and which had become hotbeds of malarial mosquitoes, have been almost completely denuded of the dangerous insects since their human neighbors decamped.

A very striking instance of this is quoted by Dr. Ludlow in "Science." At Cano Saddle a contractor's camp was formed on November 26, 1913. As first malaria-carrying mosquitoes seem to have been unknown there. On December 6 six mosquitoes, with malaria in their blood, were killed; on December 13, 34; on December 20, 162; on December 27, 113; on January 31, 211; on March 7, 3,277; on May 9, 87. The camp was discontinued early in May.

Major Ashburn thinks that the anopheles mosquito (the malarial kind) is not a malaria carrier when it breeds far from the neighborhood of man. From this we may infer that it gets the germ from man, renders it transferable, and then hands it back in an envenomed form through its bites. But, if the mosquito itself suffers from the infection, the result seems to resemble that of whiskey on certain men —it maddens with a desire for more, it breaks the bond between the victim and his native home and habits and sends the crazed sufferer in chase of unnatural indulgence without regard to consequences.

There is another resemblance between the taste of the mosquito for human blood and that of whiskey drinkers for their liquid curse, and that is that it produces, or promotes, a kind of low cunning, employed for the sake of the infatuating dissipation.

Nobody needs to be reminded of the pitiful deceptions and subterfuges that the slaves of whiskey practice, while no Jerseyman is unaware of the tremulous trickery of a mosquito in getting in its stabs on the back of the victim's neck or through thin stockings in the shadow of trousers-legs or shirts.

One somewhat comforting observation made during the mosquito wars of the Isthmus is that, broadly speaking, a distance of about 1,200 yards from the breeding ground is, in ordinary circumstances, sufficient to procure a fair degree of exemption from the mosquito nuisance.

'ROOKIES' EAGER TO ENLIST FOR REAL WAR

By WILLARD H. DAVIS,
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Plattsburg, N. Y., June 19.—The military training camp has taken on a real war aspect as a result of President's Wilson's message ordering all National Guard men to the border. The order was one of a series of thunderbolts which had burst over the camp at different intervals during the day.

This particular bomb, however, has caused more or less uneasiness about camp, and tonight many things are hanging fire as a result of the sudden and vital order.

The official message came shortly after 5 o'clock. The word spread like wildfire through the camp. Immediately groups of regulars and citizen soldiers gathered about headquarters in the tents and in the company streets, discussing the situation.

The dozen or so National Guards men stationed here at camp for instruction purposes, were hastily notified and immediately started preparations for departure.

BESIEGE TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

The telegraph offices were deluged with civilians, citizen soldiers and officers, all inquiring for details, or sending wires asking for official instructions, and sending word to their families of the situation.

The camp officers refused absolutely to discuss the situation in any way. Captain Collins, the camp adjutant, happened in the telegraph office just as word was received from Washington. He was informed of the text of the order. He said:

The only man who can tell what the effect of this order from the President will have on this camp or future Plattsburg camps, is Major General Wood, and it is very doubtful if he can tell definitely just now. I know nothing of the details.

There are some national guardsmen at the camp and according to that order they will have to go to the border immediately. Just what effect, if any, it will have on the camp here I cannot say.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, the newspaper men were not allowed in the company streets.

WILLING TO GO.

It is understood, however, that the feeling runs high and that the men are anxious for something to develop. They have all declared their willingness to go to the border if the conditions warrant it.

One officer, who refused to allow the use of his name, said:

This crisis is liable to injure Plattsburg in one way, yet on the other hand, it will be a big thing for it.

It will increase this feeling of preparedness. We are short of instruction officers as it is now.

By this move we lose more and if the condition increases in its seriousness I don't know where we will end.

There will undoubtedly have to be someone to whip the national guard into shape. Whether they will take what army officers we have here for the purpose is another thing you have to consider.

Notwithstanding the excitement the men prepared for their first day at the rifle butts for target practice with the regulation Springfield army rifle and thirty calibre bullets for ammunition. This most important factor in military training will occupy a good portion of the week in both morning and afternoon sessions.

In order that the men may get in as much time as possible on the range, the time schedule of the entire camp was pushed up a peg. The "rookies" who have somewhat reluctantly "crawled" from their cots at 5:45 a. m. during the past two weeks, were warned that they would be "bugled" out at 5 a. m. with assembly at 5:15, and the first call for breakfast at 5:40.

This was done to get the men on the range by 7 o'clock, to shoot until 11:30 a. m., return for noon mess, and start firing again at 1:30 p. m. The "cease fire" command will be given at 4:30 p. m.

So enthusiastic were the men to make a good showing at the range that they spent a good portion of yesterday, their "day of rest," at the gallery in camp practicing with 22-calibre shot at different distances. Most prominent among them were Bostonians.

F. M. Boutwell, Jr., of No. 131 State street, son of F. M. Boutwell of the Copley Plaza, a "rook" of H Company, showed up very well with his "trusty." He showed considerable knowledge of firearms, and according to his records that he will be near the top.

Charles Peabody, professor of archaeology at Harvard University, was also on the firing line. Although he has not shot for a number of years, he did very well. As he saw me approach the range he smiled and said: "The less you say about my shooting, the better."

OTHERS PRACTISING.

Sergeant George Wood, who was instructing the squad, joshed with the professor good naturedly and the professor was a match for him with his witty replies.

E. B. Dustan of Concord, was another conscientious "rookie" getting on to the rudiments of shooting a rifle. He shot several rounds, but finally was obliged to give it up as a result of a sore arm, caused by the typhoid inoculation he had previously taken.

Irving C. Decatur, well known in Malden, another member of H Company, also took his turn in getting a "bead" on the target. His bullseyes were numerous, and he promises to be in the "marksman" class if he keeps up his good work, and if the "kidding" on the part of his mates doesn't bother him any.

Mr. William P. Homans, of No. 104 Beacon street, prominent Back Bay clubman, has a mystery on his hands, and all of his friends are attempting to solve it for him. On all the bulletin boards, posted at the head of each company street, and in many other conspicuous places, are notices informing people that he has lost a silver open-face watch.

Mr. Homans says that he is considerably inconvenienced by the loss of his timepiece and that when he gets down town he has to depend on the Plattsburg clocks to keep him posted. It is the belief of his friends that he lost the watch while crawling on his stomach during the skirmishes.

Andrew Taylor of Corning street, Beverly, has just been appointed "sherister" of M Company, one of the liveliest companies in camp.

LAMBERT CASE LIKE PAGE FROM FICTION, DECLARES DOROTHY DIX

By DOROTHY DIX.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—No master of stage craft ever devised a melodrama in which the "suspense" was so marvelously sustained as it is in the great human drama now being enacted in the courthouse of this little Illinois town. No novelist ever conceived the plot of a romance in which the mystery was one-half so profound as is the mystery in the Lorpel case.

Never since the Thaw case was there the great human drama now being enacted in the courthouse of this little Illinois town. No novelist ever conceived the plot of a romance in which the mystery was one-half so profound as is the mystery in the Lorpel case.

The initial mystery is Marion Lambert herself. Dozens of witnesses, the sworn testimony of father, her teacher, the Sunday School superintendent and seven of her most intimate girl friends, have testified upon the witness stand that Marion was the sweetest and gentlest girl of little more than 16 years; that she was a devoted church member and Christian Endeavorer, that she was noted for her high spirits, and was always giggling and laughing and full of the joy of living.

GIRL IS A MYSTERY.

Hence is Mystery No. 1—A girl of eighteen, a girl single with rosy staring boy in the face, and who has the nerve to use the same poison in order to help to save her from disgrace after she knows that the reason for the appeal is longer exists. Who can pretend to forecast what such a girl on that would do?

Mystery No. 2 is Josephine Davis and the value of her testimony. Josephine Davis was Marian's closest chum. She spent the night with Marian, and they silent together on the night of the murder. Marian told her she had gotten a telephone message from Orpet asking for the appointment to meet next morning.

It is beyond doubt that the two girls sat up late talking that night, that Josephine Davis knew all about Marian's engagement to Miss Tucker, and planned what Marian should do to break off the affair and win her lover.

As soon as Marian was found dead Josephine Davis bitterly attacked Orpet as the slayer of her friend and made the Lambert family and Marian's girl friends. She told them this over and over again when there was no need for confidences. Why did she change so completely? Why, then did she tell the truth? Why has nobody ever gotten from her, neither the prosecution nor the defense, a clear story of what she and Marian talked about that night in bed after the telephone message had come from Orpet? Why? Why? Why? Is either, does the altered testimony of Josephine Davis benefit? That is Mystery No. 2.

STRANGE ILLNESS.

Mystery No. 3 is the strange illness that Marian Lambert had on the 13th of January, when her mother, aroused by her heavy breathing in the night, rushed to her bedside and found the girl unconscious. She has never clearly the same symptoms she might have had if she had taken a non-fatal dose of cyanide of potassium. Josephine Davis first testified that she saw the friends eating the cyanide in her hand, and that Marian said that Will Orpet had sent it to her. Later she changed that and Marian had not said that Orpet had given her the cyanide, but that she had said that Orpet gave Marian the capsule for spite.

Why did Orpet want to kill herself with cyanide of potassium or did Orpet twice try to kill her with cyanide? Why did she give Marian the capsule? Why, in the night, was she overcome by something that her mother thought was "like the poisonous gas that the Germans use in the trenches?" That is Mystery No. 3.

Mystery No. 4 is the cyanide of potassium that was found covering the palm of Marian's hand and extending between the fingers. The theory has been that this is proof that she was poisoned by drinking liquid out of a bottle, but that was so strong that she died instantly.

But when the girl's body was found the hand was turned down and the liquid poison was given her by Orpet, how much did she get all over her hand, because the untrampled snow about the body shows there has been no sort of struggle between the two? Whatever she took, she took willingly. If the palm of the hand was turned down, how did she get it to have run up between her fingers? That is Mystery No. 4.

Mystery No. 5 consists of the spots on the front of Marian's green coat. Dr. Harrison Allen thinks they are spots of a silver dime, and they are round and flat, but that is denied by the precipitates when it is spilled on a garment. These spots are cyanide of potassium.

These two spots are the most damning evidence that has been brought forward to show that Marian was killed by liquid cyanide, but the chemist says that about 4m is that while all of the balance of the evidence relating to her death—her stomach and liver, and the white powder that was scraped off her hand—was sent to the toxicologist to be examined immediately after the autopsy, the court with the spots on it, for the most important of all, was not sent to him for 24 hours, till 10 May, just before the trial. That is Mystery No. 5.

Mystery No. 6 is Marian Lambert got the cyanide that caused her death. Was it Orpet, or her, or what sort of a receptacle did she carry it in? It would have been so easy to take it along in a box or in a powder, but, if she did, what became of the bottle? If she did not give her the fatal dose, why did he take away the box or take away the receptacle that had held the poison?

"WHY" IS MYSTERY.

And Mystery No. 7—the greatest mystery of all—is the "why" of this tragedy. Why should Marian, lighthearted and gay by nature, with no disgrace impendible, kill herself? Why would Will Orpet kill Marian, and if he was tired of her and wanted to be engaged to another girl? There are a dozen ways of breaking off a love affair than by murder.

FORCED TO HAVE KNEES BANDAGED

J. A. Swinehamer of No. 3 Holbrook St., Neponset, Was in Terrible Condition.

In prehistoric days when men and women lived close to nature instinct taught them what medicine was necessary for their ills—the kind to relieve backs and aches that grew in the soil. Modern ways of living and the conditions of life became complex and artificial and men and women, "cliff dwellers," as they lost this natural instinct, and in seeking a substitute began using drugs, leading to very harmful results.

J. A. SWINEHAMER.

Plant Juice Medicine corrected its merits in thousands of cases of stomach trouble, and proof of its efficiency is attested in the testimonials of prominent men and women recently who have been restored to health through this remedy.

Recently the signed testimonial of Mr. J. A. Swinehamer, who resides at No. 3 Holbrook street, Neponset, has been made for some years, and is a well-known lodge member, stated:

"I had suffered from stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and rheumatism for years. I had no appetite, poor circulation, nervous and restless at nights, and my feet did not feel good. I also had dizzy spells and pains in my head and shoulders. My feet used to swell very badly and I had to keep up constant bandaging. At times I had doctored for a great many years, but could get no relief from my trouble. Now I can say for publication that I have only taken one bottle of Plant Juice and all my rheumatism has gone. I can now take bandages off of my knees. I can eat any kind of food I like. I sleep fine. I do not have any more aches or pains and I feel like a new man. It is a wonderful medicine and I can gladly recommend it to anyone."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Hodgdon & Sutton Store where he is daily meeting the most public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Democratic Platform Holds Out No Hope to Genuine Progressives

THE Democratic platform, the longest ever written in any political convention, shows the truth of what Mr. Hearst said twelve days ago in his dispatch to the AMERICAN on the eve of the Republican convention:

"The Democratic party is no longer the Radical party of Jefferson.

"It is a distinctly Conservative party. It is dominated by the men of the capitalistic East and the conservative South, and the average Democrat of that class and section is every whit as conservative as the average Republican.

"Mr. Wilson is in no sense a radical. He never has been a radical, and he never will be a radical. For a few brief moments before the nominating convention of 1912, Mr. Wilson expressed a few radical sentiments, but that he never honestly believed the progressive principles he professed is proven by the fact that in four years of unrestricted opportunity he has put no radical utterance into actual operation.

"What has become of the Presidential primary? What has become of Mr. Wilson's declaration in favor of the initiative and the referendum? What has become of the radical provisions of the Democratic platform?"

Four years ago the Democratic platform declared that "our pledges were made to be kept," but nearly all the DEFINITE PLEDGES of that platform, like the promise of the free use of the Panama Canal for American ships, the ineligibility of Presidents to a second term, the guarantee of "an adequate navy" and the promise of a discriminating duty on goods imported in American ships, were either broken by the Democratic Congress or reversed by the executive fiat of Mr. Wilson when the Democratic party tried to fulfill the promises.

Mr. Wilson opposed the tariff commission, advocated four years ago by both the Republican and Progressive platforms, and today the Democratic platform proposes a tariff commission "to make impartial and thorough study of every economic fact that may throw light either upon our past or our future fiscal policy." This is a traditional Republican doctrine, and it directly contradicts every positive tariff declaration in every Democratic platform in twenty-four years.

Mr. Wilson denounced four years ago Mr. Roosevelt's proposal for a federal trade commission to supervise industrial corporations. But Mr. Wilson has since adopted the idea, and the new platform approves it.

The plank on Americanism, "summoning all men of whatever origin or creed who would count themselves Americans to join in making clear to all the world the unity and consequent power of America," is an example of Mr. Wilson's rhetoric and eloquence. The entire plank is admirable as political oratory, but it is not a program, and is meaningless.

The plank on Mexico is quite as befuddled as Mr. Wilson's policy. It affirms the Monroe Doctrine, which needs no reaffirmation. It asserts that it is the duty of a government to protect its citizens, declares that the Mexicans have "insolently invaded our soil, made war upon and murdered our people," and then praises Mr. Wilson for his "STUBBORN RESISTANCE TO EVERY DEMAND AND SUGGESTION TO INTERVENE IN MEXICO." Intervention, implying as it does military subjugation, is revolting to the people of the United States, the platform declares.

This is hypocrisy. Mr. Wilson did intervene in Mexico when he took Vera Cruz by force of arms and expelled one government from the capital of Mexico without substituting another, and without protecting either American lives or interests. He DID intervene in Mexico more than two years ago, "SUBJUGATING" the de facto government, and thereby making himself responsible for all that followed of bloodshed, robbery, outrages and chaos!

He has done everything that a President could do AGAINST the peace of Mexico and nothing for the protection of Americans.

The Democratic Convention's fear of uttering any bold, progressive doctrine is shown by the plank on Merchant Marine. Here it is less outspoken than President Wilson has been. It does not dare to support his government-owned merchant vessels. It merely indorses the "pending shipping bill and favors all such additional measures of constructive or remedial legislation as may be necessary to restore our flag to the seas." The party has no policy, no ideas, no program. It has even less courage than Mr. Wilson, who has advocated a government-owned merchant marine.

The cause of this discord between the platform and the President is this: There was ready-made for the Democratic party four years ago a genuine Democratic shipping policy, one that has prevailed under Democratic Presidents for sixty years, the doctrine of preferential tariff taxes on goods brought in American ships.

That was the law under Democratic Presidents for more than a half century before the Civil War. Under it the United States achieved the most splendid merchant marine and the fastest ships in the world. Eighty per cent. of our foreign commerce was carried under the American flag.

The last Democratic Congress revived and re-enacted that time-tested and proven Democratic law. But President Wilson set aside the law by executive order, because two foreign powers protested against any interference with THEIR monopoly of the sea.

The best plank in the platform relates to the inter-ast waterways. This can be commended throughout. So can the plank on labor, on post roads and the parcel post; upon child labor, and land and boat, upon woman suffrage.

BOTH PARTIES are now squarely on record in favor of woman suffrage. The Democratic platform is better than the Republican platform, because more unreserved in its commendation.

There is nothing in the Democratic platform that will appeal to the radicals, nothing that can afford the slightest pretext for the Progressive voters, now without a leader or a candidate, to support Mr. Wilson.

But platforms are not of any importance anyway, UNLESS CANDIDATES, AFTER THEIR ELECTION, LIVE UP TO THEM.

Neither political platform this year is progressive. Both are retrospective. Both point with pride—to the past.

The election will be decided by Mr. Wilson's record as President and by what the candidates do and say during the campaign.

The Truth About the Opium Habit

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

THE opium habit has always been one of the fascinating horrors of medicine. The deadly charm which it holds for its victims, the dreamy and delicious joys which it is supposed to afford them, the fearful penalties which it exacts, and the depths of degradation to which it plunges them, give it a tremendous appeal to popular imagination and curiosity.

And although our imagination is a divine gift, one of the highest powers which we possess, when powerfully excited and appealed to, it can play us some very curious tricks. Seldom has it taken greater liberties with the actual facts than in the romantic and almost preposterous conceptions which we have of the so-called opium habit.

In the first place it is, strictly speaking, not a habit at all, in the sense of something that we do more and more easily by dint of practice and repetition, but a diseased craving for relief from acute discomfort, due to a poisoned or toxic condition of the cells of the body. In the second place, there is little or nothing of positive pleasure or even delirious delights about the opium habit in nine cases out of ten.

All that the vast majority of opium or morphine habitues obtain, from even the hugest doses of their darling drug, is a mild and muddle-headed sense of drowsy comfort and peace of mind, such as the average citizen gets every day after a good dinner. What drives them to the hypodermic, or the vial, is not any longings for illicit delights and rosy dreams of paradise, but simply a craving for relief from intolerable discomfort and pain. The opium addict has all the pains and penalties of dissipation, but none of its supposed pleasures. The utmost that he succeeds in doing is to "break even"—and at what a fearful price!

Incredible as it may seem, the so-called fascination of the drug for him is almost purely negative, as a means of relief from intolerable discomfort and distress, which discomfort and distress are due to the poisonous after-effects of the dose he has already taken. This is what is grimly and graphically termed, in medical parlance, the "vicious circle" of the opium habit.

Thirdly, so far from opium being a key which unlocks the gate of a short-lived seventh heaven, opium or morphine in ninety-five persons out of a hundred produces no dreams, or visions, or positively pleasurable sensations at all! Simply a feeling of drowsiness, at first rather pleasing than otherwise, but quickly becoming distressing, like that which accompanies excessive fatigue when the eyelids can hardly be held open, deepening to unconsciousness, and if the dose has been large enough—death.

If the dose has been small, when the taker awakes it will usually be with a dry, sticky mouth, furred tongue, an aching head and a nauseated stomach. All the familiar domestic symptoms, in fact, of "the morning after" magnified three or four-fold, without even the memory of a period of exhilaration and effortless triumph to console him. In a word, a healthy and normal man or woman gets astonishingly little pleasure out of opium—its only charm being its power to release from pain.

Last, but not least, instead of the devotees of opium, slaves of the pipe or of the needle, being hopelessly bound in an eternal slavery, whose fetters nothing but death will strike off, it is the opinion of broad-minded and intelligent physicians who have had wide experience with these unfortunates, that at least half and probably nearer two-thirds of them can be cured, and will remain free from the craving afterward as long as they can be kept in a reasonable condition of health.

Dust

By Jane McLean

SO soft and feathery settling on my hooks
In powdery filaments of grayish brown,
Piling your softness in forgotten nooks,
Swirling in vapor all about the town.
Dust from the phantom hands of ages past,
Of cities crumbled into vast decay,
Time's contribution that will ever last
Beyond the form and presence of today.
And centuries from now the south wind's breath,
In some far land that I have never known,
May to some other person speak of death
Out of the settling dust that is my own.

Wonders of Motion Illustrated by Speed of Huge Second Hand

Point of Indicator 960 Feet Long Would Travel More Than Mile a Minute—Why We Are Conscious of Moon's Motion When She Is Rising From or Skirting Horizon

By Garrett P. Serviss

HERE is a question that takes the mind away from battles and worries, and carries it into the pleasant fields of intellectual exercise. It offers at the same time a mental tonic and a relaxation. The less "practical" such questions are the more educational they often prove, provided that they lead to logical thinking.

"Is it not possible to see the moon's motion while rising, particularly when it is full moon, by getting a view on some chimney or flagpole? I have watched this phenomenon again and again. The moon appears to me to be moving by fits and starts similar to the minute hand on a clock, with an occasional up and down motion like a well-balanced scale after a slight disturbance. Many of our club members ridicule this statement, but I still assert its truth. But patience must be exercised, and the moon must be watched steadily for several minutes.—W. H. M."

The perception of motion is a matter of relativity and of the sensibility of the optic nerve. In order that a motion may be "seen" it is necessary that the image of the moving object thrown by the lenses of the eye upon the retina shall change its place with sufficient speed to produce a sense of constant effort by the eye to keep the image properly centred.

If the motion is extremely slow, this sense is lost, and with it the impression of continual change of place. Manifestly, different eyes may possess different degrees of sensitiveness.

Moonrise Is Imaginary, Due to Observer Being Carried by Earth's Rotation.

The apparent motion of the moon in rising is, like the sun's, due to the real motion of the observer, who is carried round by rotation of the earth in an opposite direction with an angular velocity of fifteen degrees an hour, or one degree in four minutes.

Neglecting the relatively small counter effect of its actual motion eastward in its orbit (which amounts to about thirteen degrees in twenty-four hours), we may take one degree in four minutes as a rough estimate of the moon's speed in its apparent motion westward.

Since its diameter is but a trifle over half a degree, we may say that the moon moves over a space equal to its own diameter in about two minutes. Now, in order to judge whether the eye should be sensible of this as a continuous motion, let us compare it with certain moving objects with which everybody is familiar.

The hour hand of a clock or watch moves one degree in two minutes, and half a degree in one minute. Consequently its motion is twice as rapid as that of the moon. The minute hand moves one degree in ten seconds, a speed twenty-four times that of the moon. The second hand moves one degree in one-sixth of a second, or 1,440 times faster than the moon!

These comparisons seem at first sight to negative the possibility of seeing the moon move, but there are other circumstances to be taken into account. As I have said, the perception of motion is a matter of relativity, and motion can be magnified in a manner similar to that in which we magnify an object by increasing the visual angle, without really augmenting its size.

To See the Hour Hand Move Put Your Watch Under Magnifying Glass.

For instance, if you put your watch under a microscope, you will very easily see the motion of the hour hand, while the minute hand will advance by short, rapid leaps, and the second hand will literally race across the field of view. A similar effect may be obtained by simply lengthening the hands of the watch or clock.

Thus, I find that the hour hand of my watch is 11-16ths of an inch long. Consequently the circle that its point describes is about 4.32 inches in circumference. It passes round this circle in 12 hours, or 720 minutes, so that its speed per minute is 6-1000ths of an inch. So slow a motion is imperceptible on the dial, but if the hand were lengthened to 9.6 feet, making the circuit of the dial 60 feet, the speed, at the point of the hand, would be one inch per minute, which the eye could readily perceive.

Suppose the length of the hand to be increased to about 960 feet, giving a circle 6,000 feet in circumference; then the speed of the point of the hour hand would become 8.33 feet per minute.

Now, let us apply this to the apparent motion of the moon. We have seen that this motion is, roughly, one-half as fast as that of an hour hand. Therefore, the moon's motion, referred to a fixed surface 960 feet away, would be a little more than four feet per minute. Suppose you see the moon rising alongside a tall chimney 960 feet from your eye. Since you know the general dimensions of the chimney, the moon's motion, traversing four feet of the chimney's length in one minute, becomes evident, as it would not be if it were referred to a dial only a foot or two away. The "jerky" motion is due to a physiological source, while the undulation may be caused by unsteady atmospheric refraction.

Distance from the Centre of Motion Makes Difference in Speed

It is interesting to consider a little further the effect of distance from the centre of motion on the spatial speed of a revolving point. For instance, if the minute hand of a watch were 960 feet long its point would travel 100 feet in a minute, while a second hand of equal length would travel 100 feet a second, or more than a mile a minute, which is faster than all but a few of the fastest express trains.

You

By William F. Kirk

THE sky may be like blue and gold
When you walk forth today.
Like some sweet story often told,
May rise the robin's lay.
The day may bring some wondrous thing
To one you never knew.
Some heart made gay will bless this day—
What will it bring to you?

Some well-planned wile, some cheering smile,
May thrill a soul in pain,
Or urge a climber who has slipped
To scale the cliffs again.
Today! Today! Its moments stress
As yester-moments flew,
Before its sun has slipped away
What will it mean to you?

Some human heart will swell with love,
Some heart with pity beat;
Some heart will take for old time's sake
A wanderer from the street.
Some heart today will make glad flights,
From dead remorse and rue,
Lifting its owner to the heights,
Where will your heart take you?
